LAWRENCE

Washington —(CPA)— The announced intention of Claudius H. Huston to resign as chairman of the Republican national committee on Aug. 7 has, over night, changed the morale of the Republican leaders who now are determined to wage offensive warfare to retain control of congress in the autumn elections.

The fact that Mr. Huston decided to retire after a visit to President Hoover at the White House has cleared up all doubts as to the president's own position in the matter. It has been believed for some time that Mr. Hoover was not in sympathy with those who were endeavoring to oust Mr. Huston. It develops that the influence of the leaders was unavailing and that only the president was able to bring about Mr. Huston's retirement.

Senator Fess of Ohio is slated to become chairman of the national committee with Robert Lucas, commissioner of internal revenue, taking up the work as chairman of the executive committee. If the latter should be asked to take that post he would of course relinquish his office in the treasury. It is likely also that the chairman of the executive committee will do most of the work of organization for the 1932 campaign, inasmuch as Senator Fess will naturally be occupied with his duties in Washington in the senate and will not be able to do much traveling.

Mr. Fess has been a staunch Hoover man from the moment he learned that President Coolidge would not be a candidate for reelection. He has been outspoken in his defense of administration policies and incidentally is one of the leading driers in congress. This fact will not be overlooked when it comes to lining up the dry organizations behind the administration.

Plans for making Mr. Fess national chairman have been developing for some time but have been held in abeyance of course because of the puzzling attitude of Mr. Huston. Mr. Fess is well liked by his colleagues in the senate, practically all of whom urged his selection. By taking the post of chairman of the national committee Mr. Fess will occupy a position of leadership in the upper house alongside of Senator Watson of Indiana.

One of the of the Huston situation by the president himself is expected to remove all ill-feeling that may have developed inside the party in connection with the revolt against the present chairman. So long as it was taken for granted that Mr. Huston's resignation was sought only by a faction there was a tendency to keep the party ranks pretty well divided. Mr. Hoover's action will be taken by the leaders as the final word and the committee itself will unquestionably accept the resignation and go forward with its plans for the fall campaign.

RALPH INCE RECOVERING FROM FISHING ACCIDENT

Los Angeles —(CP)— Ralph Ince, motion picture producer, seriously injured when a three-inch fish hook was imbedded in his skull through a freak accident, was said by physicians to be recovering today.

Attached at the Hollywood Community hospital where an operation removed the fish hook, said Ince was out of danger unless infection sets in.

Ince, a brothe of the late Thomas Ince, film director and producer, was hurt yesterday while fishing about 18 miles off the Santa Monica coast. The hook on his line had become snagged in seaweed and Ince tugged heavily to free it. The line suddenly loosened and whipped over his head, imbedding the hook deeply at the base of his skull. Although the boat was headed shoreward immediately, it was nearly four hours later when the hook was removed at the hospital.

KING VISITS SUBJECTS IN QUAKE REGION

Official Death List Now 2,142, Injured 4,551—Total May Grow

Melfi, Italy —(CP)— King Victor Emmanuel arose early today to comfort the earthquake sufferers in his second day of inspection in the regions devastated Wednesday.

The royal train pulled into the nearly-ruined station outside this city at 6 o'clock a. m. and the king was vigorously applauded by a large crowd. Forty-five minutes later he left for Melfi proper in an automobile, accompanied by M. Leon, under-secretary for public works.

At Melfi the king saw scenes of destruction reminding him of war days. Accompanied by Minister of Public Works Crollalanza and Prefect Orsilio of Potenza province, the monarch went through the wrecked town about.

Later he visited the large tent city for refugees on the outskirts, comforting those who had lost relatives in the great disaster.

Relief workers showed the king a 15-year-old girl who had just been rescued after having been pinned under a mass of wood and stone of her wrecked home since Wednesday. Her legs were badly crushed but it was believed she would live.

Physicians were working frantically to save ten others who had just been extricated from ruins. They were in a grave condition but faint heart beats gave hope that they might be revived by oxygen.

The most difficult phase of the relief work presented itself today in

Midwest And East Facing Hot Weekend

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The east and the midwest faced a blistering Sunday today as the heat wave came roaring back.

Cities in eastern states reported to the Associated Press that the humidity was keeping pace. It was 85 degrees in New York at noon (E. S. T.) and 83 degrees in Washington at 9 o'clock.

Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Iowa were expectant of temperatures of 100 degrees. Kansas City registered 89 at 9 o'clock and St. Louis 92 at the same hour.

Showers brought relief to the northwest. St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago all reported figures below 80 degrees. It was 91 in Cleveland at 11 o'clock and 100 in Youngstown, Ohio.

New York —(CP)— Seventy five thousand fugitives from New York's newest heat wave took refuge in Central park last night and slept on lawns and benches.

Despite tempering midweek showers the city confronted today another blistering weekend. Yesterday's high was 90 degrees and at 8 o'clock (E. S. T.) this morning the thermometer started upward from 78, with mounting humidity threatening to make the heat more oppressive than yesterday's.

Three deaths and three prostrations were reported in 24 hours.

LAMPERT'S SECRETARY TO RUN AGAINST LEHNER

Oshkosh —(CP)— A rift in the ranks of Sixth district Progressives developed today when Harry E. Schlerf, 44, secretary to the late Congressman Lampert, announced his candidacy for the post. A meeting, supposedly representing all Progressives of the district, had chosen Philip Lehner, Princeton, once a candidate for attorney-general.

The Winnebago-co Progressive club issued a statement supporting Schlerf and disavowing the other selection, made at a meeting in Fond du Lac.

HACK WILSON SLAMS OUT TWO HOME RUNS

Whiting Estate Totals $3,000,000

ADOPTED SON TO RECEIVE LARGE SHARE

Lawrence College Bequeathed $82,500—Ripon Gets $72,500

The bulk of the $3,000,000 estate of George A. Whiting, Neenah paper manufacturer who died last week, is left to his adopted son, Frank B. Whiting, Neenah. The will, with several codicils and a petition for its administration, was presented in Winnebago court at Oshkosh Saturday and Judge B. E. McDonald set Aug. 19 as the date for the hearing on the petition.

Lawrence college will eventually receive $62,500, which is now in a trust fund and Ripon college will receive the same amount. In addition Lawrence college is to receive immediately $20,000, from which will be deducted any gifts made to the college during Mr. Whiting's life time. Ripon college is to receive $10,000 immediately. The Theda Clark hospital at Neenah will receive $25,000 from the same trust fund which Lawrence and Ripon colleges will share.

Mr. Whiting's estate is believed to be the largest ever to be administered in Winnebago-co.

To the widow, Mrs. Mae B. Whiting, is left the homestead and furnishings during her lifetime. If she desires, the homestead may be turned over to the estate within three years and she will receive $75,000 in cash. Mrs. Whiting also is to receive the income from a trust fund of $150,000 until she either dies or remarries. Upon her death or remarriage the bequests to Lawrence and Ripon colleges and Theda Clark are to be paid from this fund. The First Wisconsin Trust company of Milwaukee is to administer the trust fund.

Bequests and annuities ranging from $500 to $25,000 are made to 10 individuals as follows:

Louis Otto, Neenah, gardener for Mr. Whiting, $500; Oliver W. Babcock, Neenah, brother of Mr. Whiting's first wife, $5,000; Nellie May Lashar, Babcock's daughter, $2,500; Jennie McGill Scott, annuity of $1,800; Florence Whiting, Berlin, $3,000; Frank A. Whiting, Berlin, nephew, $25,000; to his wife, Mrs. Frank A. Whiting, $15,000; Charles Whiting, Waupun, $4,000, and his wife, $2,000; Catherine Whiting, Oshkosh, $1,000; Mrs. Lucy Whiting, Denver, CO., $2,500; Mrs. Nellie Lashar, Los Angeles, annuity of $600.

From the net income of the balance of the estate Mr. Whiting willed to his son an income of $39,000 per year for 10 years when he inherits the entire estate that remains. In case the son dies the estate goes to his children.

Mr. Whiting makes the provisions that the Whiting Plover Paper company at Stevens Point and the George A. Whiting Paper company at Menasha are to be operated for ten years on the same basis as they are now operating, if it so do will not endanger the estate.

The state, with E. A. Oberholser, of Stevens Point and George Hilton, of Oshkosh, are named trustees.

MISS PAGE AGAIN WINS GOLF TITLE

Beats Jane Cannon 2-1 in Finals of Wisconsin Rapids Tourney

Wisconsin Rapids —(CP)— Dorothy Page, Madison today regained the Wisconsin women's golf championship by defeating Jane Cannon of Blumound club, Milwaukee, 2 up and 1 in the finals of the state tournament this afternoon.

Miss Cannon staged one of the most remarkable comebacks in tournament history to come within one stroke of Miss Page at the end of the sixteenth hole. She had been four down at the end of the twelfth, but won three holes and equalled the Page score on the other.

The heat, and erratic play with her irons, counted against her on the seventeenth, and she definitely lost the match when she sliced into the rough and against a tree. Miss Page, meanwhile, played a consistent game.

The girl from Maple Bluff, former women's western champion, and in 1927 state titleholder, played the course in one under par on the last nine, but this advantage did not help after the difficulty she had during the initial holes of the final round.

It was sizzling hot on the course, with a fierce sun beating down. Both contestants were exhausted when they finished. A rain last night only dampened the fairways, which were hard from weeks of drought.

Lindy Tells Of Relations With Press

Says He Will Keep Aloof from Papers Lacking "Serious Purpose"

New York —(CP)— The current issue of Editor and Publisher carries an interview by Marlen Pew with Charles A. Lindbergh.

"He draws the line strictly," Pew writes, "between the right of the press to report his activities as they relate to the science of air travel and what he calls personal curiosity. He said he appreciated the remarkable liberality of the press in support of his work."

Colonel Lindbergh mentioned to Pew five New York newspapers with which he and Mrs. Lindbergh had decided they could not cooperate and maintain their self-respect.

He said in the future he intended to do all he could to keep aloof from newspapers that "have no serious purpose." He felt outraged when some reporters followed him on his honeymoon and "for eight hours circled about our boat at anchor in a New England harbor in a noisy motorboat." He considered it absurd that he should have been forced to keep a guard at the gate of his wife's home and told of a reporter attempting to bribe a servant with $2,000 to "betray family secrets."

"Colonel Lindbergh," Pew writes, "desires to be on friendly terms with newspapermen who have a serious purpose. He likes to give his confidence to such men and said that his confidence had not been betrayed by them."

EX-JUDGE GUILTY IN MAIL FRAUD CASE

Jury Convicts Vause on All 13 Counts—Maximum Penalty 62 Years

New York —(CP)— Former County Judge W. Bernard Vause today stood convicted of using the mails to defraud in the $400,000 failure of the Columbia Finance corporation.

After deliberating two hours and 40 minutes a jury in federal court found Vause guilty on all 13 counts of the indictment which carry a maximum penalty of 62 years in prison. Judge Cox announced he would impose sentence on Wednesday.

Of six others on trial with Vause, four were acquitted and two were found guilty on some of the counts. The jury found Samuel Churchman guilty on seven counts and Harry Cruso on one. Those acquitted were Max Barmak, William Rayman, Samuel Cruso and Louis N. Vause, brother of the former judge.

As the jury foreman read the verdict, Vause sat immobile and seemingly dazed. Later, when his bail of $25,000 to $10,000 each, his hands twitched and he slowly shook his head, but he remained silent.

Vause's trial attracted wide attention as the first test of a criminal charge against one of the several judicial officers under fire recently. He still faces a perjury indictment in federal court, growing out of conflicting testimony regarding a $250,000 fee for a pier lease, and two indictments for grand larceny in the state courts in connection with the Columbia failure.

Vause, who became a judge in 1924, resigned after the federal and state indictments were returned.

STATE BOARD FINDS WATER IS PURE HERE

Conduct Investigation of Filtration Plant, River Today

The city water supply was found to be pure by the state board of health in a thorough investigation at the city pumping station and filtration plant and the upper Fox river Saturday morning. The investigation was conducted by O. J. Muegge, assistant sanitary engineer of the state board, and A. J. Hall superintendent of the filtration plant.

Mr. Hall summoned the aid of the state board after receiving many complaints during the past week from local consumers, who claimed it was impossible to drink water here due to the algae growth.

Following is Mr. Muegge's report and message to Appleton water users:

"Do not use water from private wells for drinking and culinary purposes. They may cause intestinal trouble and possible typhoid fever. Depend upon your city water at all times; since the investigations by the state board of health have always indicated a safe water supply."

"The taste in the water supply during the past few days has been due to an unusual growth of algae, a minutes form of plant life, which upon decay produces exceedingly bad tastes and odors in the raw river water."

"Due to the exceptional stream conditions and extremely hot weather, the aerator at the water works plant has not been entirely capable of removing all tastes during the past few days."

"By rigid control and management, however, your plant superintendent, A. J. Hall, has been producing a safe and sanitary water, and on free from tastes at the present time. The tastes that were present although slightly distasteful, were not in any way harmful."

Mr. Muegge also inspected the conditions on Little Lake Butte des Moines where hundreds of fish are dying daily due to stagnant water conditions.

The inspector stated that flushing the river would eliminate the condition, and he immediately summoned the aid of federal engineers at Milwaukee, who will flush the river early next week.

BURY 37 VICTIMS OF DISASTER AT COBLENZ

Coblentz, Germany —(CP)— Thirteen victims of the bridge disaster of Tuesday today were buried with a solemn mass of requiem celebrated by Bishop Bornemann, of Treves. Twenty-four others were buried in neighboring towns.

In all of the ceremonies there were expressions of sympathy for Mrs. Catherine Lawler, who is taking home the body of her 6-year-old son to Akron, Ohio. The Lawlers had been visiting the boy's grandfather in Coblentz when overtaken by the disaster which cost 37 lives.

Nobody Now Wants Baby At Watkins Chicago Home

Chicago —(CP)— The tiny bundle of boy at the William Watkins home has become, for the time being, the baby nobody wants.

The William Watkins don't want him; neither do the Charles Bambergers. All the parents want the baby boy left the hospital the same day—the former to the Watkins home, the other to the home of the Bambergers. Every one was happy.

Then Father Watkins found a tab marked "Bambergers" on the back of the baby at the Bambergers home. Confusion, anxiety and heart-twists followed. The Watkins wanted the baby at the Bambergers home; the Bambergers wanted him, too, and they kept him.

Thursday evening, scientists and medical men, summoned by Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, health commissioner,

Shaw Remains Emperor Of Literary Europe, He Says

Famous Briton Speaks Mind Freely as Ever—74 Years Old Today

London —(CP)— George Bernard Shaw, who is 74 years old today, is more than ever the literary and dramatic emperor of Europe. He admits it himself.

The first time Shaw had a play produced in Vienna the producers objected to his dictatorial stipulations about the manner in which the play was to be produced.

"I said to them," said Shaw, "politically your emperor is the emperor of Austria, but from the dramatic point of view, I am the emperor of Europe."

He was never abedicated. Nor has he ceased speaking his mind.

When the American delegation was in London attending the naval conference, one of its members, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, was introduced to Shaw at a party at Lady Astor's home after being warned in advance the recalcitrant Irish philosopher would say anything he thought, regardless of the senator's feelings.

Senator Reed thought he would get in the first blow. Losing no time he told Shaw exactly what he thought about "The Apple Cart" in highly uncompromising terms.

"What did you expect?" countered Shaw, "isn't it all about America?" Shaw has never visited the United States and declares he never will.

"America," he wrote to Frank Harris, "has the morals and outlook of an eighteenth century alliance."

Born in Dublin July 26, 1856, Shaw started earning his own living when 15 years old. When he was 20 he came to London. His early plays and novels attracted no attention and from 1895 to 1898 he was a Fleet-street dramatic and music critic, specializing in Ibsen and Wagner.

Today, "G. B. S." has become as much a part of the British capital as Nelson's monument in Trafalgar square or the Tower of London. Even the policemen know him and Shaw is about the only person outside of Ramsay MacDonald for whom all traffic is stopped as he crosses the street.

FRENCH BEAT YANK DAVIS DOUBLES TEAM

Roland Garros Stadium, Autell, France —(CP)— America's high hope of winning back the Davis cup lost to France in 1927 faded today as a remarkable French doubles team, composed of smashing Henri Cochet and the brilliant veteran, Jacques Bruzoni, overwhelmed the American youngsters, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, 6-3, 7-5, 1-6, 6-2, in the only excitement of the second day's play.

The victory gave France a commanding lead of two matches to one to carry into the final pair of singles tomorrow when Bill Tilden faces Cochet and George Lott, already beaten by French ace, Jack Jean Borotra. France needs but one more victory in the singles to win the series.

ACTOR PAYS FINE FOR PUNCHING DANCER'S EYE

Los Angeles —(CP)— Rex Lease, film actor, paid a $50 fine in justice court of Malibu Beach, fashionable picture resort, for punching the eye of Vivian Duncan, of the Duncan sisters dancing team.

The actor suddenly abandoned his plan to fight the battery charged preferred by the dancer and pleaded guilty.

In demanding a jury trial after charges had been placed against him, Lease said the blow to the Duncan eye was merely a counter struck in self-defense.

Her version of the affair was that Lease struck her in the early morning hours of July 6 when he refused to give her the keys to her car and she reproved his advances.

SIGNER SAYS POLICE HEAD TRICKED HIM

Alleged Bootlegger Claims He Was Unaware of Contents of Paper

FEARED JAIL SENTENCE

Original Affidavit Accused Slain Radio Man of Shake-down Attempt

Detroit —(CP)— The Detroit News today says that Frank Chock, whom it identifies as a bootlegger, in an affidavit today accused Police Commissioner Thomas C. Wilcox, of tricking him into signing an affidavit accusing Jerry Buckley, slain radio announcer, of an attempted shake-down.

The News says that Chock's affidavit, repudiating the original statement said to be held by the police commissioner, was made public by Thomas F. Kennedy, Buckley's law partner.

Chock's new affidavit sets forth that he was unable to read English, was unaware of the contents of the statement he signed and only affixed his signature to this statement when he feared he might be sent to jail.

The original affidavit was made public by Commissioner Wilcox as evidence of Buckley of inducing the deponent to enter bootlegging business and of later attempting to collect $4,000 from him. Commissioner Wilcox had refused to name the signer of the affidavit.

The News quotes Chock's newest affidavit in full. In this statement Chock quotes Commissioner Wilcox as saying "Frank sign this. We'll never mention it to the newspapers and newsmen. Your name, sign this and everything will be all right." Chock then set forth that he believed he was about to be imprisoned if he did not sign the statement as requested by the commissioner.

In his affidavit Chock said he had been a bootlegger in a downtown hotel for three years with the knowledge of the owner and manager.

Chock is further quoted as stating that he had been friendly with Buckley and that Buckley and his friends borrowed money from him or lent sums to him on other occasions.

Immediately after publication of the second Chock affidavit today Police Commissioner Wilcox said he obtained from Chock. Among the statements in this affidavit are:

"That Buckley suggested Chock go into bootlegging and that Buckley sent him a list of customers."

"That Buckley had stolen $3,500 to $4,000 from Chock, which he never paid back; that Buckley gave Chock checks on which banks refused payment because of insufficient funds."

BURIAL SERVICES TODAY

With a July thunderstorm as his requiem, Buckley was buried in Mt. Olive cemetery today.

Thousands of persons lined the streets as the body was carried from the home to St. Gregory's Roman Catholic church for the last services. Other thousands followed the procession to the cemetery. Most of the crowd had known Buckley only as a voice on the air, an invisible speaker who championed their cause and voiced their half-formed opinions on all age pensions, municipal government, crime and many other subjects. Buckley fell with 11 kangaroo bullets in his body early Wednesday morning of the crowd never had seen his face. Since that time more than 100,000 persons have passed his bier.

While these developments were taking place, Inspector Norval Marshall of the black hand squad, announced that he had been telephoned by "Black Leo" Cellura, for whom the police have been searching since the slaying of the announcer. Marshall said that Cellura had protested the linking of his name with the slaying, telling him he was a friend and admirer of Buckley and that he was in hiding because he did not want to be arrested for a crime with which he had no connection.

AUTO ACCIDENT MAY BE FATAL TO MARTIN HARTUNG

Green Bay —(CP)— Martin Hartung, 22, true surron and son of Isaac Hartung, county clerk of McComb co., Wis., at Mt. Carmel, was being driven to St. Vincent hospital today from injuries received in an automobile accident 13 miles north of here yesterday.

When first taken to the hospital Hartung was believed to have suffered only head and shoulder lacerations. Later it was discovered he had suffered a broken neck.

Efforts are being made to locate Hartung's parents, who are believed to reside near St. Francis, after attending a convention of Michigan doctors at Escanaba.

Young Hartung, who had been vacationing on trees at the Lawrence farm camp at Appleton, drove to Escanaba to see his parents. He was returning to Appleton when he fell asleep at the wheel of his car, went into a ditch and crashed into a telephone pole.

La Follette Pans Legge For Packers' Decree Stand

BOARD CHIEF ALSO SCORED BY M'KELLAR

Bob Says Decree Modification Would Amend Act Without Congress O. K.

Washington—(AP)—The statement of Chairman Legge of the federal farm board that board members favored modification of the packers' consent decree was assailed today by Senator LaFollette, Republican, Wisconsin and McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, as unwarranted in view of the fact the question is pending in the courts.

Senator LaFollette regarded the chairman's action as an "unusual procedure" and forecasts new legislation as an inevitable result of a modification of the decree, by which the big five meat packers consented to divest themselves of all activities not related to wholesale meat selling. Senator McKellar termed Legge's statement as "wholly indefensible" and said the board chairman was "guilty of the grossest impropriety in attempting to advise the courts."

LA FOLLETTE STAND
Containing the packers and stockyards act was "built around the consent decree," La Follette said to modify it "is to amend the act without the approval of congress."

"Congress didn't place language in the law preventing the packers from operating in unrelated business," he added, "because the consent decree was entered into while the legislation was pending."
"It is unusual procedure for the chairman of the farm board to make the announcement he has at this time because interested parties are contesting the decree in court to prevent the packers from operating retail stores. It is very strange procedure, it seems to me."

The Wisconsin senator said if the courts grant the government-contested application of the packers for modification "there is no question but that it will be the subject for legislation and no doubt it will be taken up at the next session."

INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT DECLINES DURING JUNE

Chicago—(AP)—Declines in industrial employment in the Seventh Reserve district during June were larger than in previous months of 1930, the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago's report on business conditions disclosed today.

Payrolls followed the downward trend except in leather products and public utilities groups. In these, payrolls increased 3 and 1 per cent respectively.

The report of the United States Department of Agriculture for July 1 shows a decline in demand and an increase in supply of farm labor since the April 1 report.

Although other states in the district showed a decline, the increase in bank deposits in Illinois and Iowa was responsible for a slight gain in the entire district. One hundred and ninety-three banks in the district reported total deposits of $1,083,955, $27.

MORE PEOPLE TURN OUT FOR TENT SERVICES

The special evangelistic services which have been in progress for the past week in the big tent on Levee and Atlantic are increasing in interest and attendance, according to the Rev. E. E. Turner, above, who with his wife, the Rev. Ora J. Turner, is conducting the meetings. The principal themes that have been emphasized thus far are the subjects of Revivals and Prayer.

Mrs. Turner spoke Friday night on the subject of "Repentance." The Rev. E. E. Turner will preach at the open air service on the corner of College-ave and Appleton-st Saturday evening. There will be special singing at this time.

The services on Sunday will be in the tent at 2:30 in the afternoon and at 7:30 in the evening. Mrs. Turner will preach in the afternoon on the theme, "The Spirit Filled Life," and in the evening Mr. Turner will speak on "Jesus, the Divine Specialist." At each of the Sunday services there will be an old fashioned praise meeting. The motto of the evangelists is "a revival of righteousness" and people of all denominations are invited to attend. The meetings are non-sectarian. Special musical selections are given at each service.

REOPEN BLACK CREEK BANKRUPTCY CASE

An application has been filed in court at Oshkosh for a rehearing in the bankruptcy case of Harry W. Leatherbury, town of Black Creek. The petition for the new hearing was filed by Gustave J. Keller, Jr., Appleton attorney, who represents the Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland, which had a judgment claim of $3,450 against Leatherbury. Charles H. Forward, referee in bankruptcy at Oshkosh, has reopened the case.

The schedule of assets listed a tractor, ditcher said to have been subject to a chattel mortgage to the amount of $2,700. A renewal of the chattel mortgage not having been made within the two-year period following the chattel mortgage ceased to be valid on July 11, 1930, the petition stated.

Consequently the ditcher became the property of creditors upon the bankruptcy adjudication it was said. The reasonable value of the ditcher was placed at $1,500.

CHAIN PROGRAMS MAY BE BROADCAST TO SOUTH AMERICA

Consider Building 50,000 Watt Station in Havana, Cuba

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright, 1930, By Cons. Press Washington — (CPA) — Projection of chain programs originating in the United States into South America is the objective of negotiations now being carried forward.

A new 50,000 watt broadcasting station in Havana, Cuba, which would become associated with the National Broadcasting company, now is proposed, according to consular reports, and would provide the radio link for the ultimate transmission of the chain programs into South America. Officials of the N. B. C., however, disclaim any knowledge of these negotiations.

Consul General F. T. P. Dumont, at Havana, reports to the commerce department that the new station would cost about $250,000 to build. Important Cuban telephone interests, in conjunction with the N. B. C. and the Cuban tourist commission are declared to be the sponsors. Programs in Cuba generally are of poor quality, and there are only 16 stations on the entire island using more than 50 watts power. The highest powered station there now is CMK, at Havana, using 2,000 watts.

RECEPTION IS BAD
Moreover, tropical weather conditions are conducive to static, and reception therefore is unsatisfactory. Extension of the chain programs of the N. B. C. to Cuba, and their transmission over a station with sufficient power to break through the barriers of static naturally would spur sales of receiving sets and apparatus. That, it is understood, is the primary reason for the proposed new arrangement.

There now are between 30,000 and 35,000 receiving sets in use in Cuba, a goodly portion of which are obsolete. In all there are 65 broadcasting stations on the air, but all but 16 are amateur stations which transmit phonograph records with very low power. The service ranges of these stations in most cases are only a few miles.

The proposed new station would compare favorably with any station in the United States. The highest power allowed for stations in this country is 50,000 watts, or the same power planned for the Cuban transmitter. For the N. B. C. to extend this station to a land-line connection would have to be provided from Key West, Fla. to Havana, 90 miles distant across the Gulf of Mexico.

Because of the static conditions, however, according to engineers, it is improbable that a station in Havana, even with 50,000 watts, would be heard consistently in the South American nations. But should the N. B. C. extend its network to Cuba, it is pointed out, it would be in excellent position to invade South America by adding additional wire links. Regular network programs originating in South America for listeners in the United States would be one of the inducements for this expansion, and might justify the heavy wire tolls that would be assessed for so long a link.

LIGHTNING HURTS THREE AT WAUPACA

House Badly Damaged by Bolt at 3:30 Saturday Morning

A bolt of lightning injured three persons, one probably seriously, and severely damaged a house on Seventh-st at Waupaca at 3:30 Saturday morning.

The injured: Mrs. Frank Nitkey, 19, partially paralyzed; Mrs. A. D. Lamb, bruised about the body; A. D. Lamb, shock and bruises. Every room in the Lamb residence except three, the living room and two upstairs bedrooms, was torn up by the bolt. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb were occupying a bedroom on the second floor. When the bolt struck, Mr. Lamb was thrown out of bed and across the room. At the same time a chair was knocked on top of the bed, striking Mrs. Lamb.

The lightning tore a gaping hole in the bedroom directly under that occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Lamb, broke out a piece from the hardwood floor and lodged the splinter in the ceiling.

Mrs. Frank Nitkey was with relatives in the Edward Johannek residence directly across the street from the Lamb home. The radio in the Johannek house was badly damaged.

3 TRAFFIC COUNTS TO BE TAKEN IN COUNTY

Three traffic counts will be taken on state highways in the county Sunday by the Outagamie-co highway department in connection with similar counts taken on county highways throughout the state. The counts are taken at the request of the state highway department. They start at 6 o'clock in the morning and continue until 11 o'clock at night. Counts will be taken Sunday on Highway 55, south of Seymour; on Highway 26, just west of Greenville; and on Highway 10 near the Waupaca-co line.

Michigan Candidate

Alexander J. Groesbeck is a candidate for the republican nomination for governor in the Michigan primary.

11 Out For Governor In Texas Race

Dallas, Texas—(AP)—Eleven candidates for governor, the longest list ever entered in the race in Texas, awaited the outcome today of the first Democratic primary election in the state.

Due to the size of the filed, candidates predicted a majority vote for one seemed impossible; thus a runoff primary Aug. 23 seemed inevitable.

State Senator Thomas B. Love, whose name appeared on the ballot by virtue of a supreme court order, had attempted to introduce the "anti-Tammany" issue into the election. However, rivals concentrated their fire in argument over a proposed $350,000,000 state highway bond issue, apparently ignoring, in the opinion of observers, the bolt for Herbert Hoover, led by Senator Love two years ago.

Jim Young of Kaufman, former congressman and leader of the regular Democrats in the Smith-Hoover controversy, was one of Love's opponents as was Mr. Miriam A. Ferguson, defeated for reelection four years ago by Dan Moody.

United States Senator Morris Shepard made little active campaign for reelection although opposed by two candidates. Republicans were passive in their campaign, making no public speeches. Four gubernatorial candidates were in the field.

John N. Gardner, house minority leader, was unopposed in his own party but three Republicans sought the nomination to oppose him. The only Texas Republican in congress, Harry M. Wurchel of San Antonio, was opposed in his party by Jesse A. Chase of Beeville.

DRUNKEN DRIVER IS FINED AT WAUPACA

J. S. Hoagland, 57, Chicago, was arraigned before Justice at Waupaca, where he pleaded guilty of drunken driving and was fined $50 and costs. Hoagland was arrested by Sheriff Arthur Steenbock Thursday evening on highway 10 at the south city limits after a collision. He had tried to pass the car driven by J. Kuester of Clintonville, and collided with the car of E. L. Mongold of Wausau, who was driving north toward Waupaca. Mongold was accompanied by his wife and two children, and altho both cars were badly damaged, no one was injured.

GRAPE INDUSTRY IS NEAR GOAL IN MARKETING PLAN

85 Per Cent of Tonnage Is Pledged to Federal Co-op

BY BEN G. KLINE
Copyright, 1930, By Cons. Press San Francisco — Success of the campaign to pledge 85 per cent of the California grape tonnage to the federal cooperative marketing plan, now virtually assured, has brought statewide congratulations to the industry, and is expected to benefit the state as a whole, not merely the growers and shippers of grapes.

The plan provides for all branches of the industry—growers, packers, shippers and product manufacturers—to work in cooperation under a board of control representing all factions. Marketing is to be orderly, without the scrambling and lack of coordination that in recent years have caused depressed markets and loss of profits. Federal funds will be available for purchase of the surplus, to be later marketed, turned into by-products or left on the vines as conditions warrant.

It is generally felt that all growers will get a fair deal and that the industry will be put back upon a profitable basis. This is of interest not only to the 30,000 growers, but to the 150,000 persons dependent upon the industry, to merchants who sell that number, and to banks to which farm lands have averted and which hold mortgages that average $106 an acre on San Joaquin valley vineyards. Renewed confidence in real estate is expected to result from success of the plan.

Grapes are a perishable crop, the cost of marketing of which is the principal part of the price the consumer pays. For instance, in 1927 the average farm price was $26 a ton and the average consumer price $230 a ton. It is believed that removal of the surplus and orderly marketing can bring the farm value up to a profitable level without seriously advancing prices to consumers.

The idea of withholding a crop surplus from the market is being carried out by the California peach growers and canners this season without outside assistance of any sort. The canning cling peach crop is deemed too large, and through agreement between the canners and the growers a part of it is to be left unharvested.

Growers whose peaches are not picked will receive the same price for their No. 1 fruit, minus harvesting costs, as the growers whose peaches are delivered at the canneries. By avoiding putting up a surplus it is felt that all growers will benefit.

The federal grape plan has been called the most comprehensive ever offered any branch of American agriculture, and its effect undoubtedly will be watched by farm leaders in other parts of the country.

25 CHICKENS STOLEN FROM FARM NEAR CITY

All butcher shops in the city were notified of the theft and were asked to report if any one attempted to sell 25 chickens.

Gold Star Mothers Quit Sick Beds For Pilgrimage

New York—(AP)—The fourteenth contingent of 233 Gold Star mothers embarked on the U. S. Republic today to sail for the graves of their sons in France and the battlefields where they lost their lives.

Among the members of the pilgrimage, many of whom had left hospitals and sick beds to make the trip, was Mrs. Lenora Dyer of Fort Worth, Texas, whose son by a previous marriage, Charles C. Racco, died of spinal meningitis a month after the armistice was signed.

"I left the hospital only ten days ago," she said today, "but I was determined to come and my family wanted me to. They literally packed me up and sent me off, because they knew I would feel so much happier after I'd seen Charles' grave."

Mrs. Etta Horton of Irondale, Mo., who has been ill for the past two weeks and who suffered from train sickness on the trip to New York embarked today with a feeling of relief.

"You can't tell me that the ocean will make me feel any sicker than the train did," she said. "I'm going no matter how I feel, for I know that once I see where Ernest lies, I was my youngest—I'll be all right."

Among those carrying mementoes for the graves of their soldiers was Mrs. T. W. Couch of Grandview, Texas, whose son, Lieutenant Hutt Couch, was killed Oct. 8, 1918, in the St. Mihiel drive. A corner of her suitcase held a dozen jonquil bulbs from the bed which always bloomed on her son's birthday and a box of soil from the yard in which he played as a child.

Mrs. Couch expects to fulfill two missions on her pilgrimage to France. The second is a visit to the grave of the son of a Dallas, Texas, Gold Star mother, who is 87 years old and unable to make the long trip. The Dallas mother advertised in local papers for a proxy for her pilgrimage and Mrs. Couch volunteered to fulfill the mission.

THINK PUBLICITY HELPED DECREASE CROSSING CRASHES

Elimination of Some Crossings, More Signals, Also Helped

Wide publicity early this year on a number of serious grade crossing accidents is believed by the highway commission to be an important factor in the drop in the number of these mishaps during the first half of 1930.

Elimination of some grade crossings with better signal systems placed at others may also to some extent be responsible for fewer grade crossing accidents in 1929, the commission believes.

Twelve people were killed and more than 100 hurt in a grade crossing accident at Kenosha in February.

PUBLIC IMPRESSED

"This, together with several other serious grade crossing accidents that occurred at about the same time received wide publicity in the press and perhaps the disastrous result from careless driving at grade crossings was impressed upon the public consciousness," Harry D. Blake, state grade crossing engineer, pointed out.

"In any event, the number of crossing accidents in March, April, May and June shows a sharp decrease from the record for the same months in the two previous years." While there was a decrease in the number of railroad grade crossing accidents in Wisconsin in 1929, there was an increase in the fatalities over the previous year. There were 286 accidents, 113 fatalities and 226 injured in 1929, with 360 similar collisions, 89 deaths and 312 casualties in 1928.

DRIVERS CARELESS

There are few crossing accidents in which there is no element of carelessness on the part of the driver of the automobile, evidenced by a display of bravado, or an attempt to beat the train, but probably more often in the form of inattention or physical fatigue, with thoughts on something other than the operation of the car or the condition of the road ahead, officials believe.

An average of 28 per cent of accidents reported in 1929, 1928 and in the last half of 1927 were caused by motorists driving into the sides of trains and in the two full calendar years mentioned, 42 per cent occurred on the so-called clear vision crossings where there was little, if any, obstruction to the view of the approaching train records show.

ASK CO-OPERATION

The highway commission feels that only through sincere cooperation of motor vehicle operators, responsible officials and railroad officers, can the grade crossing hazard be lessened and urged:

That motorists accept railroad crossing signs and warning signals as indicative of real danger and drive carefully.

That effective protective signals be installed at all heavily traveled or especially dangerous crossings.

That a minimum number of new crossings be opened and the maximum number of existing ones closed with traffic diverted to separated protected crossings.

That grades be separated as funds permit.

That railroad signs and protective signals be placed in the same class with other motor traffic control devices, with authority to make them effective.

MAY NOT PASS CARS AT GRADE CROSSINGS

Sheriff and Highway Commissioner Call Attention to State Law

Frank Appleton, county highway commissioner and Sheriff John Lapen this week called the attention of Outagamie county motorists to the fact that there is a state law which prohibits the passing of another motor car when within 500 feet of a railroad crossing. Previous to this month this law has not been enforced by the county motorcycle officers, but Mr. Appleton and Sheriff Lapen said the officers were to be given instructions to enforce the law inasmuch as workers from the state highway department are now marking the highways on all state and federal roads to remind motorists of the law.

The state road workers, who are busy in Outagamie county this week, are placing a broad black strip of paint along the center of the highways for 500 feet on each side of every railroad crossing. At the end of each of these center line markers are two more markers running cross wise across the road. All of these strips are about a foot wide and easily discerned by the driver. The cross-wise markers remind the traveler that he is within 500 feet of the railroad crossing and should not pass another car. It is believed this regulation will prevent some grade crossing accidents.

RAILS WOULD REVISE COKE SHIPPING RATES

Notice has been received from William M. Dineen, secretary of the Wisconsin Industrial commission, of a hearing to be held at 9:30 Wednesday morning at the office of the commission at Madison, in the application of five railroads for permission to revise the intrastate freight rates applying on coke from Racine, Racine Junction, Green Bay, Appleton and Algoma. The five roads seeking the change are: Chicago and Northwestern, St. Paul and Pacific, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Western, and Green Bay and Western. The commission points out that the hearing is being called to give all persons interested in the matter a chance to be heard before the body will consider the revision.

VON LUCKNER TO SPEAK HERE DEC. 10

German Sea Raider Is Being Brought to City by American Legion

Count von Luckner, German sea raider, who talked in Appleton last winter, will return here to again speak to an Appleton audience about his adventures as commander of the cruiser Emden which preyed on shipping vessels during the World war. The date of the speech is Dec. 10, according to word received here by Carl Becker, adjutant of Oney Johnston post of the American legion.

Von Luckner will come here under auspices of Oney Johnston post of the American legion, his talk last year being part of a lecture series. The former German sea raider pleased a large crowd which heard him last winter and was entertained by members of the legion post. The audience has prompted the veterans to ask him to return to further recount his experiences.

HOLD HORSE PULLING TEST AT DE PERE FAIR

Ask Farmers from Brown and Surrounding Counties to Enter Teams

Farmers of Brown and adjoining counties are being invited to enter teams in the horse pulling contest which will be staged in connection with the Northeastern Wisconsin fair to be held at the fair grounds between De Pere and Green Bay. The contest is to be staged on August 26. J. N. Cavannah is in charge of local arrangements.

There is to be a class for teams weighing under 3,000 pounds and one for those weighing 3,000 pounds or over. The Wisconsin record for the light class is held by E. Foiles, Cadott, Wis., at 2,965 pounds pulled straight up 27 1/2 feet, with a team weighing 2,965 pounds. Wisconsin's heavy record is 3,223 pounds by a team weighing 3,533 pounds owned by H. E. Kalber, Washburn, Wis. The world's record for the light class is 3,100 pounds pulled straight up 27 1/2 feet by a team weighing only 2,915 pounds and owned by Clyde Esley, Iowa. The world's heavy record is 3,475 pounds by Clarence Bugh's team weighing 5,700 pounds at Cherokee, Iowa. The latter is equivalent of starting a truck loaded with 17 tons on a concrete pavement.

The dynamometer for measuring the pull is operated by the Agricultural Engineering Department of the College of Agriculture. It consists of a truck provided with a hydraulic brake that is released and allowed to move freely only when the team hitched to a cable going over a pulley has lifted the weight at which the brake is set. The team then walks 27 1/2 feet, pulled by the weight, and the truck moves forward. The purpose of the contest is to give the driver experience in pulling the maximum pull of his team of horses without hurting them. Practically, there are some good prizes in store for the winners and a very thrilling spectacle for the crowd. The prizes are back to the old-fashioned fair of years ago when they had pulling contests, but didn't have an accurate way of measuring the pull. The prizes have been increased to second prize and $10 for the first in both classes, $40 for first prize.

CHAMBER FINDS FAULT WITH CENSUS BUREAU

Not satisfied with the methods used by the federal census bureau in the recent population count, the St. Louis, Mo., chamber of commerce is writing letters to chamber and associations of commerce throughout the country in an effort to determine their experiences with census enumerators, according to Kenneth Corbett, chamber secretary. Friday morning Mr. Corbett received a letter from W. B. Weisenberger, president of the St. Louis chamber, who stated that in that city enumerators had left out many names in the count.

Similar reports had been received from many other cities in the country. Mr. Weisenberger said in his letter. The names of the names left out in the initial count in Appleton but corrections were made a few weeks later, Mr. Corbett pointed out.

WORK PROGRESSES ON IMPROVEMENT OF HIGHWAY 55

Build Three and a Half Miles of New Road Between Kaukauna-Freedom

Good progress is being made with the improvement of Highway 55 northeast of Kaukauna, according to Frank Appleton, highway commissioner.

About three and one-half miles of new road is being built between Kaukauna and the intersection of Highway 55 and County Trunk JJ about three miles north of Rose Hill.

At the present time Highway 55 follows Highway 41 out of Kaukauna as far as Rose Hill where it turns north and goes to Freedom. When the improvement is completed Highway 55 will follow Highway 41 straight out on Lawest in Kaukauna to the intersection with J. The road will then turn east and travel three and one-half miles over the new section of highway which is now under construction. Then it will follow the old route again and go to Freedom.

Mr. Appleton said that about two miles of the new section of road has been completed. The three and a half miles of old road is being gradually widened and raised above the old level. The grading work is being done by the Vickery Construction company of Little Suamico at a cost of $58,000. Gravel is to be placed on the seven miles of road by Frank Murphy, Appleton contractor, at a cost of $28,000. Mr. Murphy expects to start hauling gravel this week.

The Vickery company started work about six weeks ago and have made some by the Vickery Construction company of Little Suamico at a cost of $58,000. Gravel is to be placed

Mr. Appleton said, until late in fall.

Funds for the improvement are provided by the state and the work is being done under direction of the state and county highway departments.

Semi-Annual 4-Day CLEAN-UP SALE
Starts Next Wednesday
That's how we suppose we should describe the coming FOUR DAY sale... for it is really extraordinary. Of course we know it isn't the biggest, or the greatest, or the hugest thing that ever happened... but we're going to make it mighty interesting for the people in Appleton and this territory.
After a careful survey of the store we found that the stocks are heavier now than they have been in other years at this time. So it was decided to put forth more effort than ever before to make a quick clearance of everything. Prices will be cut DEEPER than at any previous clean-up sale. So we firmly believe that it will be a record-breaking and history-making EVENT.
If you have never attended one of these sales in the past you will have many surprises coming. All spring and summer goods will be "taken for a ride." All reasonable merchandise must be sold regardless of cost or profit. Plan to come one, or all four days... it will be a sale that you'll long remember.

Soviet Says U. S. Meddles With Russ Internal Affairs

CAN BITTER OVER QUIZ BY FISH'S GROUP

Says "Anti-Soviet Demonstrations" Aim to Destroy Trade Relations

Moscow, (AP)—Izvestia, organ of the Soviet government, today editorially accuses the United States government of having interfered with the internal affairs of the Soviet Union through the Fish congressional commission. The newspaper charges the commission with violation of the elementary requirements of international law.

Izvestia is particularly bitter over the form of questions asked of Peter Bogdanoff, chairman of the board of Amtorg Trading corporation, especially those relating to Amtorg's alleged political activities and aims of the Communist International in the United States and the actions of certain Russians. Among these are M. Serebriakoff, who was expelled from the Soviet Union in 1923, acting chairman of the board of Amtorg; Victor Nogin, now dead, former minister of commerce in the Lenin cabinet and director of the All-Russian Cooperative society, and M. Platakoff, noted economist and in 1926 general director of Amtorg in New York, later a foe of Stalin.

The newspaper also charges the questioning seems to fix connection of Amtorg officers with the secret police.

"These anti-Soviet demonstrations," the editorial goes on, "have for their purpose the destruction of the wide economic connections between the United States and the Soviet Union, for the benefit of the small, limited interests of certain groups. Such a campaign can only lead to serious difficulties for the Soviet-American trade and serious damage to American financial and industrial interests."

ASSAULTS QUESTIONS
Izvestia characterizes the commission's questions to Soviet witnesses as "seditious, indecent, impudent, absurd and ignorant." The newspaper further declares the commission is assisted in its work by interpreters and advisors drawn from among white Russian emigrants, adventurers, gambling house keepers and representatives of the criminal world.

"Leading circles in New York and Washington," concludes the article, "must decide whether the conduct of the commission corresponds with the real interests of the United States."

Discussing the situation with Americans here, Litvinoff, foreign chief, intimated that the Soviet government would make a formal protest to the United States government against the "unwarrantable and unprecedented interference of the Fish commission into the affairs of the Soviet Union, if normal diplomatic relations existed between the two countries."

M. Litvinoff charged that hostile capitalist countries were attempting to wreck the Soviet Union's entire foreign trade, since "the reduction of our export trade must inevitably involve a corresponding reduction of imports."

He warned that a policy of exclusion "from world trade of such vast state as the Soviet Union" might injure the excluding country more than Russia, in view of the world's present economic condition.

Litvinoff's statement comes at the same time as the action of the United States treasury in barring shipments of Russian pulpwood and announcement of the American Manganese Producers' association of plans to appeal for a similar embargo on Russian manganese.

Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury, ordered customs collectors to deny admittance to large consignments of Russian pulpwood. The action was taken on information that Russian consuls had assisted in loading the shipments, since a tariff provision forbids the importation of goods on which convict labor has worked.

The campaign against Soviet manganese, which is essential to the production of steel, is headed by C. Carson Anderson, president of the American Manganese Producers' association. In a letter to Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., head of the congressional committee investigating Communism, he urged an inquiry into Soviet "dumping" of manganese. He said the Russians were shipping in the product regardless of the cost of production and were "flooding" the American market with increasing unemployment.

WHEAT AT $1.71 ON MARKETS IN FRANCE
Paris—(AP)—The cabinet today approved a plan of the minister of agriculture to advise French farmers to sell wheat at present high prices and also took measures to reduce the cost of living.

The percentage of foreign wheat that may be used in flour was increased from 3 per cent to 10 per cent and a general investigation of middlemen's profits was ordered.

Wheat sold yesterday in the Paris market at 10 francs a quintal of 220 pounds, which is the equivalent of $1.71 a bushel. Wheat sold at two-thirds of that price two months ago, according to Deputy Leon Meyer, minister of finance.

Minister of Commerce, Etienne Cluysin, has ordered a study of the cost of flour and other necessities throughout France and will seek measures to reduce middlemen's ex-

Writes About President

Publisher and presidential biographer, 11-year-old William J. Marsh, Jr., here shown, left, with his brother Charles, 5, before they were received at the White House. Bill carried a special copy of his book, "Our President, Herbert Hoover," and "Bub" took a gift of his own selection for Mrs. Hoover—a "Guide to New Milford (Conn.) and Its Environs," bought for 50 cents from his savings. First edition of Bill's book, which the boys printed on an old hand press, now are quoted at $25.

COMPARATIVELY SMALL LOANS TO HEINEMAN

Wausau—(AP)—Wausau bankers, refusing to an audit now being conducted into the business affairs of Walter E. Heineman, lumberman who committed suicide last week, said today that Heineman's borrowings from local banks were comparatively small.

They said the E. Heineman Lumber company, of which he was president, has been piling up a large inventory in order to avoid laying off its workmen.

10,000 COMMUNISTS IN 2 STATES, CLAIM

Witness Tells Committee About Literature Taken from Suspect
Detroit—(AP)—Jacob Spolsky, a special representative of the National Metal Trades association and a former department of justice operative, today told the congressional committee investigating Communist activities that there are 10,000 Communists in Michigan and that part of Ohio described as "around Toledo."

Spolsky was the main witness before the committee at its concluding session here today. The committee goes from here to Chicago where it will open its hearing at 10 o'clock a. m. Monday.

Spolsky, who said he had been assigned to intelligence service work during the war, testified along with two Detroit policemen regarding literature and cablegrams taken from a reputed Communist, Earl Browder, arrested in Detroit on May 26 last.

He described Browder as a representative of the Communist International and an assistant of William Z. Foster. The seized literature, Spolsky testified, included instructions from the Communist International indicating that money had been sent to operatives in the United States for the purpose of organizing demonstrations, distributing literature and maintaining organized groups. Instructions on how to most effectively oppose the police, Spolsky said, were included in the seized documents. Some of the letters he said had been sent here before the demonstrations of last March 6.

Spolsky listed as Communist centers, in the order of their importance, New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

SMUGGLERS LINKED WITH AMTORG TRADING FIRM

New York—(AP)—Two men arrested by federal agents today for smuggling watch movements named the Amtorg Trading company, purchasing agency of the Russian government in the United States, as the owner of $15,000 worth of Swiss movements offered for sale in the United States at low prices.

The arrested men were Jacob Kreitz and Abraham Schafman, charged with facilitating the smuggling 640 watch movements. They were held in bail of $15,000 each.

The complaint against them named two other men, not yet under arrest, one of which is Wolob Asaturov, said to be in Russia.

Schafman said Asaturov was controller of the Amtorg Trading company and U. S. District Attorney Tuttle declared to the court that police had told him Asaturov was head here of the OGPU, Soviet secret agents.

GOVERNOR RENEWS DEMAND FOR SEVEN THROUGH HIGHWAYS

Recent Economies Effected in Road Construction, He Points Out

Richland Center—(AP)—A renewal of Governor Walter J. Kohler's demand for three through roads crossing Wisconsin north and south and four east and west, was made by the executive here last yesterday. He coupled his oft-repeated plan with a statement of recent economies effected in highway construction.

"Early in 1930," he said, "the enormous sum of $170,000 was saved by the purchase of cement through the state purchasing agent at a time when the market price of this important road-building material was low."

"In 1929, the average cost of concrete highway was $30,579 a mile. This year contracts for 230 miles have been let at an average cost of only $26,250, a difference of more than $4,000 per mile. This represents a saving of sixteen per cent in highway cost and is the result, to a very great extent of research conducted by the highway commission to improve and effect economies in road construction. The figure includes an allowance of $600 per mile for culverts and approaches to farms, not previously included."

He said satisfactory progress had been made so far on execution of 1930 contracts conducted on 116 miles of road between Merrill and Hurley.

"A test road is being established, composed part of oil surfacing at a cost of about $350 per mile, part calcium chloride surfacing at a like cost and part of bituminous turn-over or mixed-in-place dressing at a cost of $1,000 to $2,500 per mile."

The governor said his through-roads program would involve 1,800 to 1,900 miles of additional hard-surfaced road, which if the most durable type were used, would cost from $35,000,000 to $45,000,000.

"Under the present law the state highway commission directly available federal aid instead of the $15,000,000 now given by the government and other construction problems."

He concluded his speech by suggesting a conference between the legislative highway committee, county highway commissioners, the highway commission and the executive department, in which ways would be discussed of bringing the $3,000,000 available federal aid instead of the $15,000,000 now given by the government and other construction problems."

BOY BIOGRAPHER OF HOOVER ISN'T SPOILED BY FAME

Advance Royalties Convince Bill Marsh That He Ought to Write

BY JULIA BLANSHARD
New York—"If something more comes into my head, I guess I'll just write it down and print another book."

That is William J. Marsh, Jr.'s reaction to his success as 11-year-old biographer of Herbert Hoover.

Bill is a fat-faced, eager-eyed, plump little fellow wearing size 16 suits, from Milford, Conn., who not only wrote "Our President, Herbert Hoover," but with the help of his 5-year-old brother Charles ("Bub") for short printed 60 copies of it on his own printing press and found them all snapped up, the first 10 at $1 a copy, the next 10 at $3 each, and a contract waiting for him with a New York publisher with advance royalties of $500.

Today his first editions are listed at $25 each. Bill's first edition, a reprint of his present fame—news reel, money in the bank, displays in department stores, demonstrating how the boys work their old press, pictures in the papers and everything—Bill did say he'd like to be a doctor and "help folks keep well and happy." Now, it seems, a doctor lost is a publisher-gained to the world!

To date Bill is quite unspoiled. He and his 9-year-old printer's devil brother, Bub, a skinny little head with a merry smile and dancing dark brown eyes, are visiting New York with their parents. Hoover for a formal presentation of an autographed copy of the biography, a dinner and theater party just for the boys, and introductions to many celebrities have failed to make either a bit self-conscious.

"Until we see the Aquarium and the Zoo we can't just say how we like New York," Bill said.

Milford is still good enough for the boys. That is, at least, until the late Father Marsh runs an antique shop, lets the boys help him bid in on auctions, pays them for selling in the store, and, best of all, takes them and their 13-year-old English setter, Vale, on his big furniture truck trailing antiques all over New England.

PRESS COST 50 CENTS
It was among a lot of old things that Bill and Bub found the printing press that has brought them fame. It cost 50 cents. Bill kept a cost accounting sheet of repairs—to date, $50.

Bill has perhaps the most authentic alibi for authorship that the world has yet heard. Asked how he happened to think of writing, he answered, simply:

"Well, you see, I fell on the ice last winter and had water on my knee, and had to occupy my time in bed."

His choice of topic grew out of last autumn's campaign when Mr. Marsh ran the Hoover-Curtis publicity in Milford. The boys helped distribute literature, canvassed votes and listened to all of Hoover's radio speeches.

"President Hoover is a fine Boy Scout, too, you know," Bill added, with hero-worship in his tone. Though Bill won't be 12 until July 23d, he was given his Boy Scout insignia in advance so he could greet Hoover as a regular scout.

TRAPS ARE EMPTY
Bill and Bub live a merry outdoor life in their town. They fish, tramp, plant their own vegetable garden and sell produce. "Trappin'," they agreed, was their favorite sport, with the aid of their three dogs, Vale, Jack and Sport.

"We trap for fur-bearing animals, muskrat, skunk and minks," Bill said.

"That don't keep us from trying," Bill added, with a grin.

Of their two different kinds, by actual count. There was that goose that Bill wrote his first poem about. Then there were several kinds of mice, a muskrat their Dad caught, a goat that drew their wagon, a dozen different cats, their dogs, white rabbits, pigeons, baby chicks, and the little wren that has come back to build its nest and rear its young for three years in succession in the little house that Bill built for her.

Both love the movies, especially Westerns. Bill would love to travel "on horseback, perhaps out in Wyoming," he puts it. Both want to go to military school. "Not because we want another war, but because it's so healthy," Bill said. "And because we would wear uniforms." Bub contributed. Personally, Bill said, he would prefer to be in the "calvary."

Bill is a voracious reader. Collects books of presidents, geography and history. Together they have 1000 volumes, in book cases their father built the length and breadth of the hall, just for them. Period is Bill's favorite character. But he likes all of King's books, and is very fond of Stevenson's.

In September, Bill will enter the seventh grade, Bub the fourth. They are going to finish school before they think of girls.

"But Bill already has a girl and she's got freckles like his," Bub said. "You needn't say anything. You've got one too," Bill shushed him.

The right kind of girls don't keep you from your work, Bill defended the two of them. That settled, they discussed what their next work might be. Their choice would be a biography of Coolidge. But they aren't just sure. Authors have to wait until the inspiration and the right occasion happen together. Bill is sure of that. And Bub is sure of anything Bill is sure of.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS OUT ON HIKE FRIDAY

Nine members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. went on a hike down river Friday with C. C. Bailey, boys' work secretary, as leader. The youths walked as far as Kimberly and returned to the "Y" for a swim late in the afternoon.

TREE SURGEON NEAR DEATH AFTER CRASH

Young Man Employed Here on College Campus Goes to Sleep at Wheel

Martin Hartung, 22, Mount Clemens, Mich., who has been employed as a tree surgeon college campus here as a tree surgeon during the past few weeks, is in a critical condition in St. Vincent hospital, Green Bay, following an automobile crash on Highway 41 northeast of Green Bay on the Marinette road Friday morning.

Hartung is suffering from a broken neck, severe lacerations, body bruises and possible internal injuries. He was returning from Escanaba, Mich., where he expected to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hartung, who were attending a convention of county clerks, when he fell asleep at the wheel, lost control of his machine, and turned over into a deep ditch.

His parents had left Escanaba, and were expected to visit him in his city before returning to Mount Clemens. No word had been received from them up to Saturday noon.

The injured man was brought to Green Bay by a passing motorist. He has been unconscious since the crash, and physicians entertain little hope for his recovery. His automobile was demolished.

TWO INJURED AS CARS CRASH ON HIGHWAY 114

William Buchanan, 1005 E. College-avenue, is in St. Elizabeth hospital with injuries received about 7 o'clock Friday night when the machine he was driving collided with another car driven by Boyd Collins, 328 Broad-st., Menasha, on Highway 114, three miles east of Stevens Corners. Buchanan received a broken right arm and severe body bruises. Collins suffered lacerations of the scalp and face.

Buchanan and two companions, Kenneth Kull, Madison and Frederick Reitor, Appleton, were returning from High Cliff where they were dining in Lake Winnebago. Collins was driving east on Highway 114 when the crash occurred. Both machines were badly damaged.

Borah, has not been absent from Washington more than a day or two since the Hoover administration began. He is anxious to get back to Idaho as soon as possible.

KING VISITS SUBJECTS IN QUAKE REGION

the form of urgent measures against disease. Bodies still in the ruins began to offer the menace that such disasters always present.

In some places the situation was so bad that all excepting the relief forces, who worked with sanitary equipment, were removed to a considerable distance.

The burial problem also became more acute today and instead of giving the victims separate graves it became necessary at some points simply to dig trenches and hold mass funerals.

Vice Prefect Giordano of Potenza, told the correspondent that the deaths in his province would number 300 although but 215 bodies had been recovered at noon today.

There remained no doubt that from a proper viewpoint at least, Meli, Rio Negro, Atella and Rapolla were the worst stricken, there being hardly anything but ruins to greet the eye in those towns.

REPORTS TO PREMIER

Rome—(AP)—An official report of casualties obtained up to 8 o'clock last night was issued this morning, placing the dead from Wednesday's earthquake at 2,142 and the injured at 4,551.

Even these figures probably will be augmented, as it still is impossible to estimate the number remaining under wrecked buildings in the four provinces devastated by the earth's upheaval.

The new figures were contained in a report made to Premier Mussolini by the minister of Public Works Crolanzani.

The report gave the totals with this ominous sentence added: "These figures cannot be considered definite in view of the uncertainty which certain still unexplored regions of debris present, especially in the country, as well as difficulty of calculation deriving from the absence of families who may have gone away or remained under the ruins."

The official communique accompanying the figures told how yesterday a woman and a girl who had been buried under the ruins of their houses since early Wednesday morning were finally taken out alive.

The government announcement today said that many of the local bakeries in the quake zone were resuming operations so that in the rationing problem from now on would be less serious. To avoid abuses and hoarding ration cards were in circulation.

The assurance that famine was not stalking in the wake of the earthquake did much to encourage the bereaved and destitute.

Further encouragement today came in the form of the government's action that suitable temporary shelters would be completed by next week.

All of the injured, the official report said, have been placed in hospitals with the exception of 100 in a temporary nursing home and under Red Cross tents at Santangelo del Lombardi.

Definite steps were taken today to aid families having relatives in the devastated area and to give orphaned children into the care of special societies.

In some of the districts electric service today was restored. The water supply also was safeguarded.

FEAR NEW SHOCKS

Naples—(AP)—The Italian people still dazed by Wednesday's severe earthquakes, were alarmed by the continuance of earth shocks and fear that even more may follow.

In the last two days there have been eight new quakes, although they did no severe damage in comparison with the mid-week tremors.

Five new shocks were felt yesterday in the same southern region stricken Wednesday. Two occurred in the morning and three in the afternoon, while no great damage was done.

Loss of life was disclosed the nervous populace was frightened. Meli, already torn, felt the shocks especially. Many buildings weakened by the previous tremors collapsed. Among them the Pachiohi palace.

A shock felt at Ariano Thursday caused the death of an elderly woman, killed in the collapse of the roof of her dwelling. She also felt two shocks Thursday, but apparently no damage was done.

Meanwhile, the government continued to add up the long roll of known dead, and while an official statement deprecated the reports that nearly 3,000 had been killed, it was noted that the figures might be later figures.

ENVOY PRESENT

Berlin, Italy—(AP)—Monsignor Craxiatto, the pope's special envoy, today arrived in the earthquake zone and was received by the civil and military authorities.

With his assistants, the monsignor at once began compiling a list of missing clergy and information regarding damage to church property.

He traveled by motor car from Vatican City and pursued his journey through the stricken localities today by that means.

Monsignor Chiappetta expressed appreciation of the work of the doctors and nursing nuns as he went through the tent city here.

LEHMAN THREE UP AT WESTERN AMATEUR

Beverly Country Club, Chicago—(AP)—Johnny Lehman held a three-up margin over his fellow Chicagoan, Ira Couch, at the half way juncture of their final 36 hole final match today for the western amateur golf championship.

Lehman shot a medal score of 75, four over par, to lead his lead while Couch scored a poor 80. The match was an up and down affair with only three of the eighteen holes halved.

COW'S STOMACH 'WINDOW' HELPS STUDY OF DIET

Scientists Select Second Animal to Continue Their Experiments

State College, Pa.—(AP)—The man of penitence Jesse, the famous cow which lived four years at Pennsylvania state college with a "window" in her stomach, has fallen on another.

Again selecting a Holstein, scientists christened her Pennstate Jesse II with a painless operation in the college veterinary hospital.

A local anesthetic was used and beyond shaking her head several times the heifer gave no signs of being aware that anything out of the ordinary was taking place.

The opening to her largest stomach is kept closed with a special rubber plug which can be removed when scientists wish to study the bacterial action in Jesse's dinner.

The studies interrupted by the death of the original Pennstate Jesse now may be resumed. They open up a new field of study in the investigation in dietetics.

It has been found that the bacterial content in a cow's stomach changes as new elements are introduced to her food, new bacteria appearing and developing as the new rations were continued, and disappearing when the elements are withdrawn.

How these bacteria originate, where they come from and how the findings may apply to humans and influence the general practice of dietetics, comprise a field of large potentiality.

The fact that an organism was found in the stomach of Jesse I, which manufactured vitamin B when there was none in the ration, led to the belief that special bacteria may be derived from other organisms in the stomach, or are developed from existing forms when they are required.

LITTLE RELIEF FROM HOT SPELL PREDICTED

Little relief from the torrid blast which has kept this vicinity in its grip for the past few days, is seen for the weekend.

This vicinity sweltered again Friday afternoon with the mercury registering 95 to 98 degrees above zero. The hot blasts of air prevalent on College-avenue and other business streets drove the shopping public for cover, and the streets were almost deserted.

More thunderstorms and showers are seen for Saturday night and Sunday. Winds are shifting from the northwest to the southwest, a indication that warm weather will continue.

At 6 o'clock Saturday morning the mercury registered 62 degrees above zero, while at noon it registered 91 degrees above zero.

Dairymen and Breeders of Dairy Cattle:

This event will be our summer breeders picnic. All three breeders associations of the county — Holstein, Guernsey, and Brown Swiss — are joining hands to make this the biggest and best breeders picnic ever held in the county.

Here is a splendid opportunity to cooperate in boosting the idea of "Better Dairy Sires for More Profitable Milk Production."

The scrub bull trial dramatizes this idea far more effectively than just plain talk can do.

The exhibits on the train also show in an interesting and understandable manner how dairy herds can be and have been improved by the use of good pure bred bulls with production backing.

The good type bulls of each breed on the train show the dairymen what kind of a sire to look for. They will also be for sale to any one interested.

Any Outagamie breeder wishing to consign a pure bred bull to be auctioned off at the picnic should get in touch with the County Agricultural Agent's office immediately.

Let's get together then on Wednesday, July 30. See that your neighbors all know about the big doings. Urge them to come and bring their families.

Yours for a bully good picnic.

CHICAGO NEWSPAPER SITUATION

The Chicago newspaper situation is anything but flattering. Various publications are engaged in attacking each other with veiled insinuations of racketeering and of collusion with the underworld. There are threats of libel suits, but if one is to believe half one reads, they will never be tried.

The indications are that the Chicago newspaper world has been contaminated by commercialized vice and crime. Out of all of the rumors that are flying there must be some truth. We think there has been evidence for some time of a lack of high purpose among Chicago publishers themselves. Some of them have become instruments of propaganda and most of them seem to be catering to the lower and cheap side of life. They have been conspicuously weak in their assaults upon gangsters and racketeers. They seem to take a delight in playing up crime and exaggerating misdeeds and scandals out of all proportion to their true news value. There is reason to believe that this policy does not rest entirely on the theory that publicity is the most effective antidote for crime, but on the proposition of widening reader interest and commercial exploitation of sensationalism.

Chicago journalism has been getting yellower and yellower, lower and lower. It has been content to see the city plundered and mauled with a maximum of tolerance and a minimum of resistance. The Chicago newspapers en masse, possibly any one of them, could have made that city a hot place for the crook, the racketeer and the desperado if they had so willed. To a certain extent they must be held responsible for the present situation, if some of their staff are not actually involved. Whether a bonafide and thorough investigation of their activities and organizations can be had by the state is a matter of doubt. The present inquiry may or may not bring results, but it ought at least to awaken the owners and publishers of Chicago dailies to a realization of conditions in that metropolis and their duties in relation thereto.

TAKE A VACATION

If a vacation of any kind is possible this year, it is to be taken. If money is low, take it inexpensively. But some kind of change from the ways of the daily grind is always a good investment. It isn't the lack of the few dollars that will put the family behind next winter. It is the weariness and lack of ginger that lay one open to colds and flu and other troubles. It is discouragement that prevents the money maker from taking the right steps or using the wiser judgment. It is lack of decision that holds the earnings down. It is lack of fresh, cool judgment that spends money for the wrong things and then has none left for the right ones.

So take it if you can. But if time off cannot possibly be obtained, if money is absolutely not available, then plan for next year. There are cool and pleasant books—like Stewart Edward White's "The Forest" or "The Mountains," like the works of John Muir about his Rockies and Alaska, or the great and varied literature of the sea. There is a little essay of Ruskin's on "The Pine Tree," one of Richard Jeffries on "The Pageant of Summer"—and when you have found those in the library there are lots of others on the same shelves.

There are the always delightful railway and steamship folders. What if you cannot afford to go abroad until the children are all educated, and that will be eleven years? You can look at folders and have all the pleasures of vacation. You can read about the things you want to do and see. Then if you can go later, you will be prepared; if you can't, you will have had a good time anyhow. "Outlays on holidays should be money well spent," says the Bank of Montreal. "Often what otherwise would be a real, beneficial vacation is spoiled by thoughts of the cost—perhaps by the thought of sacrifices to be made afterward. Get the greatest pleasure and benefit by saving well in advance. Enjoy the thrill of anticipation as well as the carefree holiday itself." Start a thrift fund now for next year's fun. Get folders on the way back.

YELLOW JOURNALISM

Chicago newspapers are now turning their propaganda against the lake states to the assertion that the Great lakes, filled with an abundance of water for navigation, ought to be emptied for the benefit of navigation on the lower Mississippi. Water in that section of the river is very low and has seriously inconvenienced shipping. Chicago objects that the supreme court decree amounts to a dyke which prevents the use of lake water to sustain navigation in the Mississippi river. It charges that the United States Steel corporation, the Lake Carriers association and Niagara Falls Power company are responsible for this sad state of affairs. Here is an example of yellow journalism along with mischievous propaganda.

The Great lakes are not always overflowing with water. High and low levels run in cycles. Only a few years ago there was not enough water for the ordinary requirements of navigation, and it is only a question of a relatively short time until this condition will exist again. In fact, there are signs that the levels are beginning to recede already. It is therefore of the greatest importance that all of the waters impounded in the Great lakes shall be conserved in every possible and legitimate way.

There is certainly no obligation upon the states of this territory to consent to the draining of the Great lakes for the benefit of the Mississippi watershed. Navigation in that basin will have to depend upon its own resources, together with nature's supply of water. Every sort of specious argument that can be conceived is employed to misrepresent the position of the lake states and the purposes and effects of their determination to preserve the lakes against raiders for the use and further development of the greatest commercial waterway in the world. Thus far the lake states have defended their position with success, but if they are to continue to do so they must be constantly on guard against the insidious efforts being constantly put forth by Chicago's municipal and political interests.

MR. HUSTON WILL QUIT

Claudius H. Huston announces that he will resign as chairman of the Republican National committee on August 7th. The announcement followed a conference with President Hoover. The two being close friends it is not improbable that Mr. Hoover directly requested Mr. Huston to resign for the good of the party. At any rate, he is to go.

There has been a good deal of mystery surrounding the whole affair, from the time the disclosures were first made about Mr. Huston's use of funds of the Tennessee River Improvement association. Sometimes a very little thing can discredit a man politically, while at other times it takes a landslide. The same is true of a political party. The Republican party at this particular time is in no position to carry excess liabilities. It will have troubles enough in the fall elections, while its prospects two years hence are none too bright. It is just as well therefore that Mr. Huston slides out of the picture.

British radio experts have succeeded in using a captive balloon as a transmitting tower with the advantage that its height can be easily changed.

The British Empire occupies about one-quarter of the habitable surface of the earth and its population exceeds one-quarter of the estimated number of the human race.

In the stables of Buckingham Palace there are 80 horses, practically all bays, for the use of the English royal family and household.

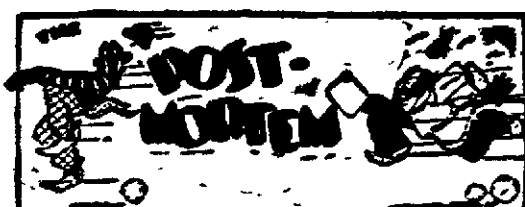

English people drink less than one pound of coffee per capita; in Scandinavian countries the consumption is over ten pounds for each person.

The cross on the top of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, has arms eleven feet long and about three feet wide.

Argentina raises about 40 per cent of all cattle produced in South America, and Brazil nearly one-third.

American tourists spend about $300,000,000 a year in Europe, France taking the biggest share.

In a small New York town, candidates for an office decided who was going to run by means of a card game. This, Tillie, is gambling. Which we feel is a pocket edition of how similar issues are decided in the metropolitan areas.

Give Somebody a Medal

People sometimes choose the oddest times in which to argue. On a New York beach last week, lay an unconscious figure, dragged from the water by life guards who were busily applying artificial respiration in the most accepted fashion. Up dashed an ambulance with a doctor and a pulmonator. The guards protested against the pulmonator, claiming that it would injure the victim's lungs. A tense argument arose. Came the police with another pulmonator. The police didn't argue. They drove away both factions and applied their apparatus.

Meanwhile the patient had died.

'Tother night, Wild Bill and Jonah went out for the weekly refreshments, and wandered into a soda fountain along the main stem. Up breezed a Greek goddess with bewitching eyes and a breath-taking smile.

"A double chocolate soda," we managed to stutter. (This was Monday night, not Saturday.)

"Sure," and the goddess galloped away.

"Hey," yelled Wild Bill at the departing back, "I wanna malted milk!"

Ten minutes later came two glasses. We looked. Double chocolate soda was right—there were TWO PLAIN ONES!

These "Tree-Sitters" Are Still Going Strong!

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York—Every show on Broadway has countless incidental expenses that make theatergoing as costly as it is.

Among these are the salaries of the various employees whose presence is required by union rules. So many stage hands, carpenters and the like must be hired for each show and one man is not allowed to touch the rug or the table or the curtain that another is hired to handle.

This has resulted in numerous curious situations.

Miss Ruth Draper, the mime, for instance, is a one-woman show. She uses throughout an evening's performance only one backdrop, a plain brown curtain. The other properties in any one scene are never more than a chair or perhaps a table. By her characterizations, the actress builds up imaginary settings so that the audience sees a garden or an office or a living room that is not there.

Obviously, therefore, Miss Draper has no need for a carpenter. Yet she may not make an entrance without a carpenter on the backstage staff.

Another rule that every season astonishes newcomers to Broadway is that of the teamsters' union which requires the scenery of a show to be carted whenever it is moved to another theater, even if only across the street, as frequently happens.

In such instances, the procedure is to load the scenery on a truck—usually there is several truckloads—and drive solemnly around the block. Then it is unloaded on the opposite sidewalk from where it was picked up. This happened only recently in moving a show from the Royale theater to the Masque, 10 feet away.

WHERE FRIENDS WORSHIP
Long Island has become known as a fashionable playground for millionaires, with its yachting waters, flying fields, polo grounds, golf clubs and roadhouses.

Yet within a six-mile radius are five old-fashioned Quaker meeting houses, with congregations still flourishing.

Across from the Piping Rock club, where the Prince of Wales played polo and golf on his last visit, the Matinecock meeting house stands, surrounded by aged trees. It was erected in 1723. The Jericho meeting house, near the Aviation country club at Hicksville, was built in 1738. At Westbury, in the vicinity of the Meadow Brook polo field and the metropolitan airports, are two Quaker meeting houses, one put up in 1830, the other in 1902. The fifth, dating from 1736, is at Manhasset.

Long Island has had its beginning with 1659 a traveling minister, John Taylor, settled at Oyster Bay. Council Rock, where three years later George Fox, a noted English Quaker, preached, is a landmark now on one of the Oyster Bay estates.

The communications must bear the signatures of the authors as an evidence of their good faith, but not necessarily for publication. Anonymous communications will not be used. Letters should not be longer than 400 words.

NO DIVORCES

Editor Post-Crescent—In your editorial of your paper I read under the heading of "Double Standard," the church winked at, or sanctioned such marriages as the King Carol of Rumania, of recent date. I will refer you to the marriage of King Henry VIII of England to which the Roman Catholic church did not give a divorce, nor Napoleon of France either. According your statement that all marriages are alike.

The Roman Catholic church does not grant or sanction divorces in royal families or wealthy families or any other. I feel you have treated the Catholic church unfairly because I know that you can not prove your statement.

I remain,
Your reader,
F. J. Brehm.

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writer's names are never printed. THE DISINFECTION OF THE SKIN

Surgeons still rely principally upon vigorous and prolonged scrubbing with soap and hot water to "sterilize" or render "aseptic" the skin.

But they recognize the practical impossibility of sterilizing even the cleanest or healthiest skin; that is, freeing the skin absolutely of germs; so that it is the universal practice of surgeons to wear thin rubber gloves while operating, treating or dressing wounds or bandaging or examining patients with infectious ailments. "Infectious" means that the ailment is caused by germs; it is not necessarily communicable.

There is considerable difference of opinion among physicians at present in respect to the method which is most reliable for disinfecting the skin preliminary to an operation.

Formerly it was quite customary to cleanse the skin with soap and water scrubbing, dry it thoroughly and protect it with a suitable covering or dressing or bandage until time for the operation, and then the surgeon carefully removed the covering and painted the field of operation with ordinary tincture of iodine.

Then some scientific investigators found that iodine was not so efficient in disinfection as he had supposed. It failed to destroy some of the bacteria that are likely to be present in the ducts of the sebaceous and sweat glands.

Early as a result of those observations new antiseptics or germicides were introduced and some of these attained quick popularity, aided with judicious advertising by their manufacturers.

I name no names, but merely indicate in a general way that these new skin disinfectants were mainly of the aniline class. I suspect that their staining effects had something to do with their popularity, not only among the doctors but among the laity as well. We all like to see the medicine work. But then, one might say the same thing about iodine.

Personally I have always preferred to rely on good old tincture of iodine when I wished to attempt to disinfect my own precious skin. Understand, I'm very old-fashioned about some things; for example, I have only this month discovered a safety razor, and now if I were to take mine away from me I'd turn bolshhevik.

The most recent investigation of the skin disinfecting business, by George W. Raines, Ph. D., Marie Severac, M. D., and J. C. Moetsch, Phila., led to these conclusions:

Alcohol, which is used extensively as a skin disinfectant, is discredited as a skin disinfectant. (Nurses should make a note of this.) A solution of hexylresorcinol to 1,000 failed to prevent bacterial growth. Acetic acid was efficient in 2 per cent concentration, resulting in sterilization in 80 per cent of cases. A 5 per cent solution of iodine is ineffective and a 7 per cent solution is effective in 88 per cent of cases. Two per cent mercuric-chrome-alcohol-acetic-water solution showed only 79 per cent efficiency. Four hundredths of 1 per cent (1 to 2,500) solution of metacresol in water produced sterilization in 100 per cent of cases.

So if we are going to use any skin disinfectant other than good old iodine it had better be metacresol. I'm not going to use metacresol myself, so I don't care if it costs 10 times as much as tincture of iodine costs.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Food For Drug Store Cowboys

Please advise whether a youth of 19 obtains proper nourishment from malted milk for lunch. Sometimes an egg is mixed with the malted milk. That is all he has for lunch. (Mrs. W. A.)

Answer—No. Such a substitute for lunch might do well enough for a lounge lizard or a drunksore cowboy, but not for a regular boy. For health's sake it is generally better to buy lunch in a restaurant where real food is sold, and I believe any one with a fair understanding of food values can get better food at less cost in the regular restaurant.

Some Roaches Still Extant

Please send me your famous recipe for exterminating roaches. (C. J.)

Answer—I really doubt whether I do right by the inoffensive little fellows. We have no evidence that they ever cause any illness or do any harm to man. I wish some Fabre would investigate these intriguing little insects and publish a book about them, before they become extinct. Meanwhile, if you insist, repeat the request and enclose a stamped envelope bearing your address. Recipe too dangerous to entrust to printers.

Its Oil Right If Nice and Fresh

Being a constant reader... started taking cod liver oil. Would like to know if it can be taken during warm weather? (H. J. F.)

Answer—Yes, if you wish. As a rule it is as well to lay off cod liver oil through the summer. Let plenty of sunlight on naked skin substitute for it through the season while the sun's rays are most nearly vertical.

Gosh, Here's Gratitude

Not long ago I wrote you for advice and you advised... then they found it of my teeth very bad. I decided to have every one extracted. Now I have a fine set of artificial teeth and am getting better very slowly... I just wish you knew how grateful we are for your kindly helpful writings. (K. G. D.)

Answer—I had to read it over twice, suspecting there might be a catch in it somewhere, but by cracky it is genuine. However, I certainly didn't advise any one to have all the teeth extracted because some were found bad. If they were my teeth I'd cling desperately to every one not positively condemned by both physician and dentist. One good tooth of your own is worth all the artificial sets ever fabricated.

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

THE sights in Bagdad all seemed queer. "Oh, my, what funny people here," said Clowry. "They're not dressed like us at all. I wonder why. The flowing gowns in which they dress keep them pretty hot, I guess. Yet they all seem real comfortable as they go walking by."

"They're used to it and do not mind," the Travel Man replied. "You'll find that when you're used to anything it always seems all right. No doubt they also smile at you 'cause they don't wear the clothes you do. In little suits like Times wear, you likely look a sight."

Then Clowry broke right in and cried, "Well, anyway, I'm satisfied! Come on, let's look around a bit and see what we can see. Some of the buildings look like clay. I'd think they'd crack and fall away. And, gee, how strange the streets all look. They're narrow as can be."

They walked around beneath the sun until it ceased to be much fun. "Here, this is much too hot for me," said Clowry, with a sigh. "If you all want to walk a bit, I'll wait here in the shade 'til sit." "Oh, no! We're going to rest up too," he heard the others cry.

They sat for just a little while. Then Clowry broke out in a smile. "Oh, look!" said he. "I see a stream. I'll bet it's cool down there." "Why, that's the Tigris river," said the Travel Man. "I'm glad that we are right near by it. Come, I have a plan that's rare."

They reached the shore and all took note of quite a funny looking boat. Instead of like the usual boat, 'twas absolutely round. "Hop on," the Travel Man cried out. "We'll find what this is all about." And so they did and shortly on a river (in) were bound.

(The Tynmites see more of Bagdad in the next story.)

A BYSTANDER IN WASHINGTON

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—For the 16th time in the history of this country the congress of the United States has bestowed its traditional act of courtesy on the widow of a President.

In the closing hours of the 71st congress, an act was passed giving to Mrs. William Howard Taft the privilege of sending her personal correspondence through the mails free of charge.

The widow of William Howard Taft is one of four wives of ex-presidents of the United States who now have this privilege. The others are Frances F. Cleveland, Edith Carew Roosevelt and Edith Bolling Wilson. The widow of Grover Cleveland has had freedom of the mails since 1909. The other two, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Wilson, since 1924.

MARTHA FIRST

Martha Washington was the first recipient of this courtesy by congress. Other wives of Presidents who have had only to write their names in the stamp corner of the envelope to have it carried by the government free of charge are:

Louise Adams, Mrs. Harrison (widow of William Henry Harrison); Dolley P. Madison, Sarah C. Polk, Margaret S. Taylor, Mary Lincoln, Julia D. Grant, Lucrilia R. Garfield, Ida S. McKinley, Mary Lord Harrison (widow of Benjamin Harrison), and Florence Kling Harding.

Not so generous to the only living ex-President and his wife is congress. Former President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge must pay postage on their correspondence. However, should Mrs. Coolidge survive her husband, as in the case of Mr. Taft, she would be treated similarly.

No ex-President since James Madison has had freedom of the mails after he retired from the White House. And Madison was the only one who had a complete franking privilege. He could not only send letters and packets free of charge until the time of his death, but even those sent to him were postage free.

WASHINGTON PAID

Letters and packets sent to George Washington were postage free, but those he sent had to be stamped.

The same was true of Thomas Jefferson.

Oddly enough, John Adams could send mail free but incoming mail had to bear postage.

Since then ex-presidents have had to buy stamps.

Charles Carroll, who in 1823 was the sole surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence, is the only person, other than those four ex-presidents and widows of Presidents, to be given the personal franking privilege.

The parish has extended an invitation to all to attend the services of the church.

Have You Heard—

You can bring a bit of outdoor summer cheer into your indoor kitchen life if you have some growing thing in a colorful container.

Sweet potato vine, ivy or Wandering Jew requires little attention and will quite compensate you for the trouble of adding a bit of water to the container every now and then.

Especially attractive are some of the inexpensive glass bowls that hang by chains from a swinging hook. They come in cornucopia design, in round shape or modern stic triangular. All you need is water and a stalk of some vine that roots in water.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

If Jack isn't engaged, why doesn't he tell me? Sue asked herself as she sat in the living room and tried to darn her father's socks on a long, snowy afternoon. Her mother or her callers upstairs and downstairs had come for a few minutes to announce that she was going shopping with Nancy Becker.

"And yet why should he?" Sue mused. She let the sock drop to the floor. "I don't mean anything to him. I'm just a good friend and his stenographer. Only . . . Sue lit her lip tightly. "Only he does like me a little. But he doesn't love me!" She stood up, restless, unhappy, filled with conflicting emotions that she didn't understand.

Outside the walls of the brown house, life went on. But she was not there to watch it now. What was happening? "If I could just know . . ." She grabbed the sock and started to mend vigorously.

Miles had taken her to the garage and driving several times in the evening when her brother and father could stay with her mother. Sarah often came to talk, usually with a box of bonbons or some orange ice or chocolate cakes under her arm, and the two girls would eat and talk with Mrs. Merriman. People were all kind . . . No, it wasn't that, that bothered her. She knew her unhappiness and suspense concerned only one man.

Her head fell over on her arms and she started to cry. One choking sob after another.

"Why, Sue?" At the sound of the familiar voice she raised her head.

"Grace! But aren't you working?"

"Not any more! I'm through getting ready to sail away. Just one more week. But what's the matter why are you crying, Sue?"

"Because there wasn't anything else to do," Sue answered. "You are here now, so I can stop. I hope you find lemon colored moons over every town and a blood red one along the coast of Normandy and that you come back with enough happiness to last forever!"

Heavy the way, Sue, how does Ted like his new job?"

"He loves it! It's his chance and he's taking it," Sue answered.

"Why?"

Grace hesitated. "Because I keep bumping into Jean Brady all the time downtown but he never seems to come here. I wondered if . . ."

"Alone?" Sue queried.

"Well, not exactly. He's usually with that yellow topped Andrews girl. But it's funny he doesn't come here."

"Not at all," Sue answered, and the hot bands around her heart grew lighter and lighter until they were gone. "He doesn't want me to know he comes to see Barbara, I suppose. He's probably learned about Jack and Barbara."

"They aren't engaged now, are they?" Unless the man's a moron he can see that she's after something that we talk about in terms of dollars and cents. That must be off, though. Anyway, I saw Jack at lunch and he didn't look upset. A little thinner, though, and I don't believe he's so nonchalant.

"He was with some strange girl. Something familiar about her, too. I've tried to remember where I've seen her," Grace screwed her jade green eyes together.

"Now I know who she is!"

NEXT: A call from Jack.

Hints For The Shopper

Shelac is a highly important and widely used product. It is "manufactured" by one of nature's own busy artisans, the shellac bug, common to India and the West Indies which exudes a fluid by means of which it anchors itself to the shellac tree. After being prepared for commerce the fluid is used for floors and furniture.

Varnish shellac known as orange shellac is the gum as taken from the tree. It is of a light golden color. While shellac is the same product after it has been bleached. It gives the same gloss, but is without color. Shellac may be tested easily after it has been applied and dried by running a finger nail over it with sufficient force to leave a well-defined mark which "spalls," that is, leaves a scratch which shows up white. The scratch is an indication of a cheap, porous substitute for shellac. Good shellac will show the indentation or mark, but will not show any variation from the original or undented surface.

Cross-Over Vestee

BY ANNERELLE WORTHINGTON

A navy blue and white printed crepe silk of smart practicality reveals feminine influence in plain blue shoulder bow and bow tied sleeves.

The tricky cross-over vestee of white silk pique adds distinction to its simplicity of line.

It's straight and slender to just over the knees, where the circular flounce starts to widen into flattering fullness at hem.

A narrow belt of plain blue crepe marks the natural waistline.

Style No. 2550 can be had in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

Blue-violet wool crepe with vestee and bow trim of matching faille crepe is chic.

Peach pink shantung, lime green flat crepe silk, daffodil yellow linen with white sheer linen, sailor blue pique dotted in white with plain white pique, coral-red chiffon and printed chiffon voile in black and white with plain white are charming suggestions.

News About New Books

Review by Eleanor Evans Wing

THE SCARAB MURDER CASE—by S. S. Van Dine.

Van Dine, that most prolific of mystery story writers, has published a new thriller, The Scarab Murder Case, published by Scribners. We should hesitate to review it, were it not for the excellence of its predecessors, for this latest mystery is as far in advance to the Greene Murder Case and The Bishop Murder Case.

The knowledge and erudition of the writer are again put on display with great wordiness and many footnotes. But like a show-window, which is overcrowded with its wares, the pages of the Scarab Murder Case lose much from over ostentation. The same characters parade their amateur detective Vance, the ponderous Sergeant Heath, Markham, the district attorney, and various and sundry detectives. Their characters have not changed an iota since the first Van Dine story, and undoubtedly many of their hats are becoming a bit irritating. For instance, it would really be a relief to have Vance forget to drop his "g's."

Van Dine has evidently had the ambition to emulate and recreate such an epic as that of Sherlock Holmes. Many mystery writers have assayed this task, with little or no success. Unfortunately, instead of trying to picture the simplicity and naturalness of Sherlock and Watson, he has given his detective the wisdom of the Philarchs and a mind like a card catalog—and these characteristics are both irritating and impossible.

The plot of The Scarab Murder Case is much simpler than the earlier stories. By that, we mean that only one murder occurs, although there is a possibility of more. The unravelling of the mystery is heavily done, and the conclusion is disappointing. The most obvious suspect is the right one, but the method by which Vance, the detective, strives to mystify his co-workers is very dull. One has the feeling that there is no co-operation between the detective and his fellow-workers. In fact, that Vance is trying to put a fast one over on Sergeant Heath and Markham, instead of struggling to bring the criminal to justice. As usual the culprit commits suicide through Vance's machinations. All in all, the story is very slow, and the bulk of cryptological observation weighs down the plot with unnecessary details. The presence of two Egyptians gives melodrama—but melodrama falls very flat in the concluding chapters.

Perhaps if The Scarab Murder Case had been the first of the Van Dine stories, we should see more merit in it. But most readers long for variety and change, and the constant repetition not only does not endear the caste to the public, but bores them exceedingly. Read the book, if you like mystery stories. But do not expect anything exciting or especially startling because you won't find it. Almost any other mystery story will satisfy your desires as well or better.

"The Great Astronomers" by Henry Smith Williams bears the distinction of having been recommended by

He will return in the spring of 1931, after having visited Brussels, Cologne, Lucerne, Munich, Rome, Naples and Paris. His forthcoming novel, "The Earth Told Me," will be released by Simon and Schuster on October 2 among their dollar fiction series.

"Fourteenth Street," a novel in verse by Percy Shostac, was published on June 19 by Simon and Schuster. The author is as yet unaware of the enthusiasm reviews that it is receiving. He is living in Mallorca, an island in the Mediterranean between the coasts of Spain and Africa.

POOR JUDGMENT THREATENS RULE OF GANGS AT LAST

Chicago and Detroit Protest When Citizens Are Victims

BY OWEN L. SCOTT
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press

Detroit—Lack of judgment in applying the art of scientific modern murder threatens the rule of powerful gang syndicates in their two principal strongholds—Detroit and Chicago.

Hoodlum chieftains made a costly error when they decided to kill Jake Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, who admittedly was levying tribute on them in return for gambling privileges. They blundered equally when four bullets were placed in one square inch of the head of Jerry Buckley, local radio station manager, who is now turns out, has his finger on the pulse of gangland—but whether to end its reign or to gain profit remains a question.

Maybe modern gangs, powerfully bulwarked with money and influence, can survive these mistakes without suffering more than temporary inconvenience. Thomas C. Wilcox, Detroit commissioner of police, and for 13 years a department of justice agent, thinks not. In a private interview Friday he outlined his reasons for feeling that way.

"We intend to run them ragged," he declared. "Gangsters will be thrown into jail unceremoniously. If they are sprung out on writs of habeas corpus, they will be thrown back in jail."

PROMISES FORCE

We will apply a rule of blood and iron. Force is the only language these mobs understand and they're going to get it.

"No innocent person has been killed by gangs in Detroit. As for Buckley, not a doubt exists but that he was using his radio crime talks as a racket. I have no objection to his being in documentary form. But that does not justify murder, and right now we have one of the killers upstairs. These gangsters will be taught a lesson they won't soon forget."

Observations that have a familiar ring, these are, to anyone who has watched and listened to police drives in Chicago for the last six years. But underneath the string of killings and the official explanations are evidences that the hoodlum world is in the midst of important transitions. Eleven men murdered in two weeks in this city testifies to that.

The famed Detroit river plays its part in the underworld drama. Boats running from Canada—so profitable that it brought the Capone and Moran mob here from Chicago in full force—practically ended with the new Canadian customs regulations. These prohibit liquor clearances to the United States. Added hazards took away the profit from rum running at this point.

SEEK NEW FIELDS

Consequently river gangs have been forced to look to new fields. Their money seeking stories of murder and crime that have occurred here of late.

Hi-jacking of narcotics shipments is reported by government undercover men to have accounted for several recent deaths. The dope trade is said to be growing rapidly in importance to the underworld. Then large cutting parties, formerly used to cut away from Canadian liquor into four gangs of supposedly good Canadian liquor, have been forced out by the lack of the Canadian stuff. Their men often have gone into the alley brewery business in competition with older outfits.

Again, Michigan has a strict anti-gambling law, but handbooks operate by the hundreds and they are controlled by a monopoly of the "three musketeers"—gangsters. Attempts to muscle into this racket have brought trouble. Favored gambling joints, until just now, have had a big run. Those without protection have met trouble. Jealousy and squawking resulted. More murders followed. That of Jerry Buckley, according to the police chief, others, however, insist that Buckley was killed because of revelations he made concerning gambling activities in Detroit in daily radio talks.

POLITICS IN PICTURE

Then there is politics. The present mayor, Charles Bowles, who stands recalled, ran for office as a reform candidate. He received the church and the anti-socialist league support, and, strange as it may seem, according to local testimony, he also had the backing of the gangsters and racketeers. Stories have been printed here recounting rumors that campaign contributions were received from gamblers.

Under John W. Smith, mayor for two terms, and John C. Lodge, Col. Charles Lindbergh's uncle and the predecessor of Bowles, gambling houses and saloons were not molested. It was only after Bowles took office that trouble occurred, except on the river where liquor was being run.

When Bowles came into office it was not long until he set about organizing a special vice squad in the police department. Ordinary policemen no longer dealt with gambling and prostitution. Soon, according to testimony here, certain "weak-knees" and certain vice establishments were being full blast, while others next to them were shut down.

Harold H. Emmons, local attorney and first police chief under Bowles, after hammering by newspapers, closed some favored gambling establishments. He immediately was removed from office.

Under Commissioner Wilcox, who followed, the vice squad still functioned. He told the writer that he never had favored the squad and had drawn an order for its abolition the day before Buckley was killed. Its abolition was one of the first steps taken after that event.

Every one of a score of informed and influential persons interviewed here emphasized that officials of American cities cannot deal with the underworld, even indirectly, without delivering favors. Much of Detroit's trouble and much of the trouble with gangs in other cities is attributed by them to underworld alliances that create rivalries between criminal mobs and an outbreak of violence.

BANKS READY TO FINANCE EXPECTED RISE IN BUSINESS

Borrowing Power Estimated at Eight Billion Dollars

BY PRESTON S. KRECHER
(Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press)

Wall Street, New York.—(CPA)—If the expected business revival materializes in the fall it will find the banks of the country splendidly prepared to finance it. The present borrowing power of the member institutions of the federal reserve system is estimated at approximately eight billion dollars, or in the neighborhood of three times the maximum amount of bills discounted by reserve banks at any one time.

The borrowing power of member banks is measured by the amount of eligible paper they hold which could be rediscounted by the federal reserve banks, plus the amount of United States government securities they own exclusive of those pledged to secure national bank notes still outstanding. The estimate of the borrowing power just given is one made by the federal reserve board itself from data furnished by the member banks.

While member bank credit outstanding has been increasing to such an extent that it is currently about as high as it ever has been, the reserve bank credit, or credit representing accommodation extended by the reserve banks to member banks, has been steadily diminishing because the banks have not required it.

BANKS STRONG NOW

As an outcome the total has decreased about $24,000,000 within a year and today is not a billion dollars. Member banks, moreover, have rediscounted outstanding nearly three quarters of a billion dollars less than a year ago. They have available on the other hand large potential borrowing power. No one need fear, therefore, that banks are not strong in reserve credit upon which they can draw when occasion arises.

Bank credit expansion this year has taken an unusual trend. Normally commercial loans would have expanded while investments and security loans would have contracted. This year the reverse has been true. Commercial loans have actually declined more than $200,000,000 since the first of the year while security loans have expanded over $800,000,000.

That expansion of security loans and investments of member banks has been made possible by what has been perhaps the most remarkable expansion in bank deposits in years. The actual increase in deposits of reporting institutions has been nearly one and one-half billion dollars. These deposits have not been applied to the extension of commercial credits as in normal years but have nevertheless been used in indirectly aiding business by financing capital projects. New capital emissions are merely the modern businessman's method of financing future production and distribution of goods. Hence the banks by investing deposits in such capital issues have been aiding the prospective expansion of business.

Some analysts draw a parallel between the current business recession and that of 1924. It is recalled that industrial production, after reaching a peak in the spring of 1923, declined with but moderate intermediate recoveries until it touched a low point in July 1924. By the following January, however, had again risen to almost its old peak of 1923. Member bank statistics also have followed the same general lines as they traced in the 1924 cycle.

MANY TOURISTS FREQUENT CAMP NEAR KAUKAUNA

Location and Scenery Attractive, Offering Comfortable Spot

Kaukauna—Tourists have been frequenting the tourist camp at the west end of Wisconsin avenue for the past few weeks in great numbers. There are always two or three staying overnight, and sometimes as high as 10 or 12 spend an evening there. Some of the visitors, attracted by the beautiful scenery, remain several days.

The camp is free to those wishing to make use of it, and two stoves are provided for camper's needs. Abundant supplies of firewood are available as the recent storm felled some of the old trees. They were chopped and dragged near the stoves for the convenience of the campers. However, some tourists like to purchase their meals, and since the city is only a few blocks away, they often do so.

Excellent bathing facilities are offered at one end of the park, where swimmers have built a pier, and cleaned out stones and seaweed. Each morning several tourists bathe before leaving on the next long drive. Another attraction is the log cabin erected for the local organization of the Boy Scouts on the hill overlooking the park. Many tourists have expressed their desire to view the inside of the cabin, which is kept locked because of recent damaging by vandals.

Many have been excluded from the park, and many different species of birds inhabit the woods. Squirrels can also be seen hopping to and fro among the trees.

The river abounds in frogs and crabs, and some of the tourists catch the carp and some perch from the river for one or two meals. The carp, however, are not very good to eat.

Cinders have been placed on the road leading down to the camp by city workmen, and these men are constantly keeping the road in shape. A place to make a complete turn with an automobile has been provided.

REPLACE OLD ROOF ON PUBLIC LIBRARY

Kaukauna—Work was started Friday morning by the Haas hardware concern of replacing the old roof on the Kaukauna Public Library with new tin. Copper eaves also are being put onto the edges of the roof. The old tin which was placed on the roof a number of years ago was rusted through in many spots allowing rain to seep through.

TRAFFIC IS RESUMED ON DELANGLADE-ST

Kaukauna—Traffic was resumed on De Langlade-st Friday morning after being closed for the past two weeks while the R. C. Vickers Co. was installing a culvert. Pedestrians were able to pass, but motor traffic was detoured around the marsh. A small amount of filling remains to be done.

The Post-Crescent's representative at Kaukauna is Lloyd Derus. His telephone number is 194-W. Business with The Post-Crescent may be transacted through Mr. Derus.

LAW-ST BRIDGE IS CLOSED SEVERAL HOURS

Kaukauna—Traffic crossing the Law-st bridge was detoured around the Wisconsin-ave bridge for several hours Friday afternoon when the draw caught as it was closing. The steel of the bridge expanded and the beams caught in the wood and held the draw there until late in the evening, when the steel contracted again and the bridge was closed. Canal traffic was not bothered as the bridge was open far enough to permit it to pass.

HUMBER WILL HURL AGAINST KAUKAUNA

Former Kaw Player Will Appear in Lineup With Little Chute

Kaukauna—An announcement Friday has set the tongues of many Kaukauna baseball fans wagging in skeptical tones and they have good reason for it. George Humber, former Kaukauna hurler, will climb the mound Sunday afternoon at Little Chute to pitch against his former teammates. Humber ought to know the likes and dislikes of his former colleagues, and if he does there will be more gossip in the atmosphere.

However, Les Smith's gang also has an advantage, for they know just what to hit at, and when to expect it from Humber. The Chutes will have to support their new hurler better in pinches than their previous hurler as he often forgets and puts them where batters like them best.

Yunk, Kaukauna's new hurler, intends to better his record of 11 strikeouts against Nee-Menasha, and at the Hollander's expense. He is no slouch at the plate, and has a record of three hits out of six chances with his warclub. Heat is his middle name and he takes to it like a young duck to water. For it was only last Sunday that he pitched 11 innings and has as much steam in the 11th as he had in the first.

Sunday's game should be a good one, for the Lamersmen, glowing with a victory after nine straight losses, will battle hard to keep in the win column. The probable line-ups will be: for Kaukauna, Yunk, pitching, Wenzel, catching, Collins, first base, J. Vils, second, Ray Smith, shortstop, Ray Vils, third base, and McAndrews, Les Smith, and Van Vyk in the meadow, for the Chutes, Humber, pitching, Harties, catching, Skell, on first, Gossen, second, Chips Versteegen, shortstop, Bobby Versteegen, third base, with Faris, Theln and Poca way out in the green grass.

SWIMMERS FIND MANY PLACES ALONG RIVER

Kaukauna—Swimmers of this city have found a place for nearly every day in the week. Swimmers can be seen every day from the Law-st bridge swimming in the current at the guard lock, and also in the shallow waters below the government dam. The place below the dam is well inhabited on the days that girls have individual use of the municipal pool.

Another place that is well frequented is the fourth lock, because of its splendid place to dive from. No fatalities have happened this year, and the reason for this is that wherever the swimmers go there are one or two good swimmers present to guard against accidents.

The municipal pool is open in the afternoon to boys on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays from 3:30 to 4:30. It is open in the afternoon to girls on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at the same hours. Men can swim in the pool on Thursday evenings from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. Women are allowed in the pool from 7 to 8 on Monday evenings.

Social Items

Kaukauna—The Sunday school board of Immanuel Reformed church met Thursday evening.

The Women of Mooseheart Legion will meet Monday evening at Forester hall on Wisconsin-ave.

The Trinity Dramatic club of the Lutheran church will hold an ice cream social at the school auditorium from 7 to 10:30 in the evening. The club has made arrangements for a select program.

Branch No. 64, of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, met at St. Mary's church Friday evening. After a short session the members marched to the home of the late Henry Amore, where they recited the rosary.

Routine business was transacted at the meeting of the Odd Fellows Thursday evening at I. O. O. F. hall.

BROWNE DISPLAYS INTEREST IN WIDE RANGE OF SUBJECTS

Waupaca Representatives Also Active on Several Committees

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent)

Washington—A broad range of subjects of national interest is covered in the public bills introduced by Rep. Edward E. Browne, of Waupaca. None of these public bills has yet been enacted into law, however.

Work on the Committee on Foreign Affairs, of which both he and Rep. Allen Cooper of Racine are members, and work in connection with Indian Affairs also held the interest of Rep. Browne during the 71st congress to date.

Rep. Browne sponsored two resolutions from the Committee on Foreign Affairs authorizing international conferences on industries of special interest to Wisconsin. One of these authorizes participation of the United States in the ninth international dairy congress, to be held in Copenhagen, Denmark, next July, and the other made possible United States participation in the international fur trade exhibition now in progress in Leipzig, Germany. The former was passed by both houses of congress, and the latter is on the senate calendar and will be passed early in December in time for the congress. The president asked that both measures be passed.

URGES AMENDMENTS
Rep. Browne has proposed two amendments to the constitution of the United States, neither of which has been acted upon in any way. One of these would abolish that curious institution, the electoral college, thus providing that on the ballots the candidates for president and vice president of the United States shall be voted for directly instead of merely electors who will support those candidates. The other would abolish "lame duck sessions" of congress, providing that senators and congressmen shall take office on Jan. 1 instead of on March 4, and having no session of congress in which senators and representatives who have been defeated or have retired shall continue to legislate, as now happens. The president and vice president would take office on Jan. 21, instead of March 4, the additional time being given to allow the house of representatives to choose a president if the election has not decided the question.

A bill to prohibit lobbying was also introduced by Rep. Browne but not acted upon. This bill is somewhat similar to one introduced by Rep. John C. Schafer of Milwaukee, and provides for registration of all persons attempting to influence congressmen in connection with legislation, showing the interests which employ them. No such bills were reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, and no hearings were held on them.

The measure in which Rep. Browne displayed the keenest interest was a bill prohibiting the use of oleomargarine or other butter substitute in any government institution, except federal prisons, supported by government funds. This would add greatly to the market for butter.

NO ACTION ON BILL
This bill was not acted upon, but congress passed a bill amending the oleomargarine act to include new kinds of butter substitutes among the imitation butter products to be taxed and Rep. Browne spoke in favor of this measure, which the president has approved.

Toward the end of the session, Rep. Browne introduced a bill to prohibit the transportation of machine guns in interstate commerce. This bill was not acted upon either, but the intent to enact some legislation eventually regulating the transportation of firearms in interstate commerce is indicated by the appointment of a sub-committee of the house committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to study the subject. The Browne bill provides a penalty of $10,000 fine or five years' imprisonment for the importation or transportation of a machine gun in interstate commerce.

To add to the federal governments funds for highway aid, Rep. Browne introduced a bill to create a special highway fund out of the $407,341,955.01 which France owes the United States for surplus war material, highway equipment and supplies bought from the United States after the World war. Under the Browne bill, half this fund would be used on the regular federal road program and the other half to help build secondary or "farm service" highways not now included in the federal program. Rep. Browne's only private bill, except numerous pension bills incorporated in omnibus pension bills, was a bill authorizing the payment of $2,750 to Germaine M. Finley, widow of James G. Finley, late a foreign service officer of the United States, who died in the service. This bill was not passed.

Rep. Browne's record on tea and may votes on the tariff follows: Voted for passage of the bill in the house when congressmen had aid highway system. This bill was not reported from the Committee on Roads.

Rep. Browne introduced two bills the enactment of which is sought by the Menominee Indians, but neither was passed. One of these would authorize the Menominee tribe to employ general attorneys, at a cost of $20,000, to work out problems connected with their timberland, and water power resources.

HAD BUREAU SUPPORT
This bill had the support of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, but was not passed, despite repeated efforts of Rep. Browne, because Rep. Thomas L. Blanton of Texas and Rep. Louis Crampton of Michigan objected to it, and such bills are considered only by unanimous consent. It remains on the calendar during the next session.

The second Menominee bill would have referred to the Court of Claims, with the right to appeal to the United States Supreme court, the claims of the Menominees against the federal government. The principal claim is due to cutting of their timber in violation of the LaFollette timber cutting law. The Bureau of Indian Affairs opposed this bill on the grounds that they are advocating a general Court of Indian Claims to handle all such matters, and it was not reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Rep. Browne introduced a bill authorizing a $150,000 fish cultural station in Wisconsin, with auxiliary stations at other points. This was not acted upon, but the general fisheries program provides a $50,000 fish cultural station for southern Wisconsin. Rep. Charles A. Kading of Watertown was a member of the committee working out the five-year fisheries program.

Rep. Browne's only private bill, except numerous pension bills incorporated in omnibus pension bills, was a bill authorizing the payment of $2,750 to Germaine M. Finley, widow of James G. Finley, late a foreign service officer of the United States, who died in the service. This bill was not passed.

COWS REQUIRE MORE THAN PASTURE TODAY

Pasture alone was satisfactory for cows in the early days when even the best of cows yielded only an amount of milk which would now be too low for profit, but the present day animal has been developed to have a capacity for producing milk so great that any ordinary pasture cannot furnish her enough feed for both milk production and for the maintenance of her body, says Prof. F. B. Morrison, head of the animal husbandry department at the New York state college of agriculture.

Referring to the present surplus of milk, Professor Morrison says the way to reduce the surplus economically and efficiently is to cull out and sell to the butcher the low producers, which, even under normal conditions, do not pay for their keep. If every dairyman who has low producers in his herd would dispose of just one cow, the poorest one in his herd, the dairy surplus problem would be solved almost overnight, he says.

All investigations on the cost of milk production show that high-producing cows produce milk and butter fat more cheaply than those of moderate or low production. High production can never be secured except when good cows are well fed. Negligent feeding of good cows is mistaken economy, leading to decided loss, says Professor Morrison. On the other hand, liberal feeding of poor cows is just as poor practice.

SMOKERS START NEARLY THIRD OF FOREST FIRES

Madison—(AP)—Smokers and campers started nearly a third of the forest fires of known origin in Wisconsin during the past 10 years, according to tabulations by the conservation commission. Smokers alone have caused 20.4 per cent of the fires of known origin and camp fires 11.8 per cent.

The largest single known cause of fires 54.3 per cent of the total is carelessness in land clearing. Railroad fires caused 19.3 per cent of the number of fires, the commission said.

BOSTON FANS FETE RABBIT MARANVILLE

Veteran Major Leagues Re- ceives Car, Silver and Purse Today

Boston — (AP) — The 37-year-old Peter Pan of baseball, Rabbit Maranville, grizzled veteran of 13 campaigns of shortstop play, today had his "day."

An automobile, a chest of silver, a purse and other gifts awaited his appearance at the Brave-Cardinals doubleheader. Even the knot-hole gang and the peanut vendors had gifts for him.

Fans from far and wide in New England joined in planning the day. The biggest advance sale Braves field ever had proved the popularity of the "Springfield kid," who ranks with Babe Ruth in popularity in the annals of Boston big league baseball.

In his youthful days with youthful ways in 1912, he came to the Braves from the New Bedford team of the old New England League. His first game was on a September day against the glamorous Cubs with Evers, Tinker and Chance in the opposition, the "Rabbit" handling 12 chances without a slipup.

Slips have come since then, and a few triumphs. Sixteen years ago this month, the Braves were in the cellar—and in October were world champions. The rabbit was a main-spring in the infield.

The years passed and the "Rabbit's" meanderings took him into the navy for a brief stay and to the Pirates, the Cubs, the Dodgers, the Cardinals, and into the International League. On the way out of baseball in 1927, he came back and was an outstanding performer for the Cardinals against the Yankees in the 1928 world series.

He returned to his old home baseball town last year, and the scenes of youthful triumphs apparently bettered his play.

Kimberly Pioneer Celebrates His Birthday

Kimberly—A celebration in honor of Christ Hartjes, Kimberly, was held at his home here, the occasion being his ninety-fourth birthday anniversary. Sixteen children, 59 grandchildren and 48 great-grandchildren gathered at his home to help him celebrate.

Mr. Hartjes, who was prominent in district school affairs for over 15 years, and who acted as headmaster for 12 years, is still enjoying good health, and is able to take long walks daily.

He came to America from Warraby, Holland in 1866, settling in Little Chute. He was on the team for 26 years, and while about a year and a half old. The boat on which they came over, sank on the return trip to Holland, a few weeks later.

After buying a stove and a few other household articles, he had but $6 left, on which to start in a barren forest land. He lived on the Little Chute site for two years, and then moved across the river and settled on land, now known as the town of Buchanan.

In the first few years in the settlement Indians used to visit with him, and sit for hours talking and laughing, but he never understood a word, Mr. Hartjes says.

APPLETON WAS VILLAGE
The city of Appleton was only a small village, and there were no mills, only the old grist mill at Little Chute, on the newly constructed canal.

For several years he worked in Green Bay, and walked from there to Little Chute many times. He was engaged as a brick layer for several years. He constructed a church in Darboy, Phlox, and also helped build the new Little Chute edifice. He put towers on Little Chute, Wrightstown and Freedom churches.

In 1894 he went back to Holland to visit his mother, who died a year later at the age of 93 years.

SMALL TOWN GIRL MAKES $3,000,000 IN ONLY 10 YEARS

Ann B. Gordon's Career Out- rivals Boy Heroes of Ho- ratio Alger

Dallas, Texas. — The small-town boy who went forth to conquer the world and came home rolling in wealth has nothing at all on Miss Ann B. Gordon.

Her story reads like one penned by Horatio Alger only, in this case, the hero is a girl instead of a boy, and it has been fact, not fiction.

Ten years ago Miss Gordon set forth from the diminutive town of Flat Creek, Tenn., to see what she could do in the way of making a fortune.

Today she is president of her own oil company, has a fortune worth at least $3,000,000 and holds oil lands and leases that promise to make a good deal more than that for her in the next few years.

"The Royalty Queen of Texas," as she is called, has just returned from a visit to the old home town. Flat Creek, which has just about 100 inhabitants, turned out en masse to greet her. There was a family reunion with her father and mother, three brothers and four sisters joining in, and a big time was had by everyone. Now Miss Gordon is back at work, ready to push the job of turning oil leases into cash.

GREW UP ON FARM
Miss Gordon grew up in Flat Creek as a farm girl, one of the seven children of Colonel and Mrs. R. D. Gordon. Her first venture into the business world was as a real estate dealer.

The real estate game in a town the size of Flat Creek is very exciting, and in 1920 she decided to go farther afield and see what she could do. She came to Texas, and opened a real estate office here. The post-war real estate boom was on and her business prospered.

Then she began to notice the vast sums of money that were being made in the oil fields. She made a careful study of the situation, and finally invested $93,000 that her real estate deal and made her in the great Van oil field.

In a short time this investment proved a wise one. Ten oil wells have been brought in, producing from 10,000 to 50,000 barrels of oil daily. And there are yet 60 more locations to be drilled on her property in the near future.

She has also organized the Ann B. Gordon Oil Co., Inc., and directs all of its activities as its president. In addition, she has taken a 40-acre lease in Brown county and has brought in six producing wells on it.

Miss Gordon does not talk much about her success. When she is with close friends, however, she is fond of telling of some of the freakish incidents that have marked her business career.

HAS PROFITED, LOST
Once, when she was still in the real estate business, she closed a deal and counted on a large commission. To her disappointment, however, she was unable to collect it, and in the end had to be satisfied with a collection of second-hand furniture. She had no earthly use for it, but she took it because it seemed slightly better than nothing at all. Some time later she disposed of it by exchanging it for a lease on a section of almost worthless land in west Texas; and when a prospective purchaser appeared she gladly sold him the lease for a dollar an acre. Then, later on, she discovered that the land held oil and that she could have realized $64,900 for her lease.

That's one of her anecdotes. It represents one of the few occasions when she lost out on a deal. To balance it, there is the story of the time when she took a lease on a section of land in New Mexico as her commission on a real estate deal. The land was not supposed to be worth much but she held on to it, recently a 500-acre well was brought in near her holdings, and she has become worth a big sum. She has not sold it, but is planning to drill it herself as soon as she finishes developing her other holdings.

Miss Gordon's home-coming was made a great occasion by the towns-people of Flat Creek. The town turned out to greet her and made of her visit one of the big events in its history.

"Miss Ann," as she is familiarly known, has never married—all her life she has been too busy with business affairs to worry about love.

GOVERNOR KOHLER TO GIVE TALK AT PICNIC AT ONEIDA

Wild West Rodeo Will Be Feature of Annual Event Sunday

Oneida—A crowd of between 5,000 and 7,000 people is expected here Sunday to attend the twenty-fourth annual picnic of the Immaculate Conception church, according to the Rev. A. A. Vissers, pastor of the church.

Two features are outstanding on the program. One is an address by Governor Walter J. Kohler, who also spoke at a picnic here two years ago, and the second is the booking of the C.S. Western Rodeo and Stampede.

Governor Kohler will land at Oneida's airport about 11 o'clock Sunday morning and will be guest of honor at dinner at noon. As soon as the governor arrives the rodeo group will present its first performance. Riders and horses will give exhibitions of bronco busting, steer roping, bulldogging, fancy and trick riding and racing. Two other exhibitions are scheduled at 5 and 8 o'clock.

The address by the governor will take place at 1 o'clock. He will be introduced by A. B. Fontaine, Republican leader of Green Bay. A loud speaker system is to be installed so that Governor Kohler's address will be heard in all parts of the picnic grounds.

The picnic grounds are located on County Highway E, between Oneida and Freedom, and a short distance south of Highway H leading from West DePere to the reservation. The location is about five miles south of the Oneida station. The management is arranging to have a dozen deputy sheriffs to protect motor cars when parked on the spacious area around the church property.

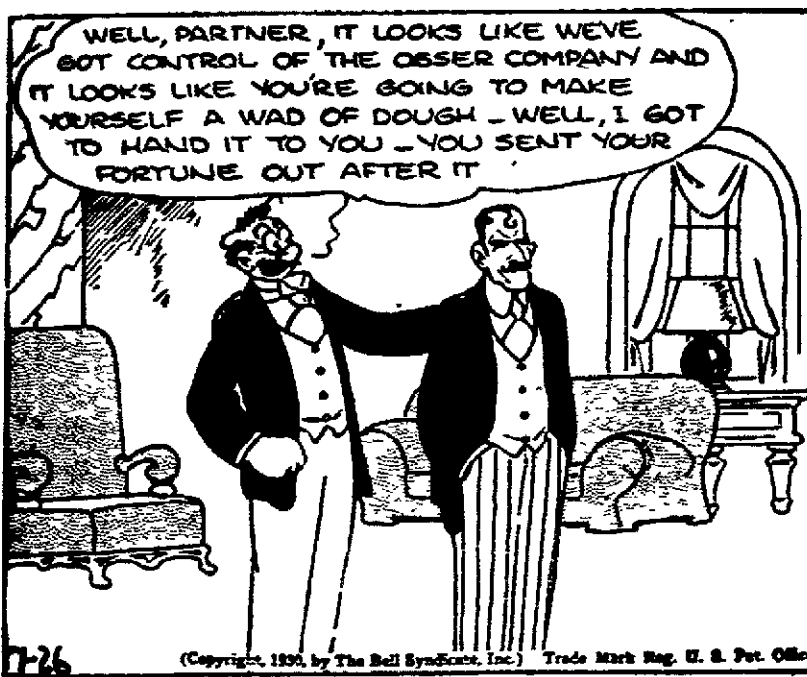

Games and amusements and band music will be included in the afternoon and evening programs. Booths for serving meals, lunches and refreshments are being erected for the picnic.

JACQUELINE ON HER OWN

by RICHARD STARR

Chapter 27
TERRORS OF THE NIGHT

THERE was only one thing in Jacqueline's mind as she walked down the road to get as far away from Mr. Carew as possible before he discovered how neatly he had been fooled by a mere girl, who understood the potent effect on a man of an artistic faint.

She knew it was about 10 o'clock and that she was some 45 miles from London. Also she did not love dark country lanes miles away from anywhere. They frightened her.

She kept walking as fast as she could. Twice she tried to run, but the fog was too thick, and each time she fell.

She had been hurrying down the road for more than 10 minutes when she heard the quick pounding of steps behind her.

Somebody was running along the road towards her. It must be Carew.

This was only too true. He had found the farmhouse in a few minutes, and had hurried back to the car, only to discover that the fainting girl had marvelously recovered and vanished.

Illumination came to him. He realized that he had been sold. The dead faint was a hoax, specially staged for his benefit, and he had fallen into the trap.

In a rage he went pelting down the road, knowing that there was only one direction the girl could take.

To make matters worse, he had a powerful electric torch with him, and with this was searching the hedges as he ran, to make sure that she was not crouching somewhere in hiding.

Jacqueline, who had started running directly she heard the thud of flying feet, saw the glimmer of the torch coming toward her, and saw at the same time a stile close at hand.

It was the work of the moment to climb the stile and crouch on the other side.

The runner did not slacken, but went straight on past the stile, flashing the light on it.

On the particular meadow in which Jacqueline now found herself there was a path, if it could be so called.

A narrow, winding foot-track led across from one stile to another, and she followed this by the feel of the harder ground under her feet.

When she had crossed two more stiles she felt safe so far as Carew was concerned, but there were plenty of other troubles to face. She was now completely lost. She wandered forlornly in a bumpy meadow, her thin shoes and stockings already wet through with the dew.

And she was frightened. Much more frightened than she had been of Mr. Carew and his melodramatic plot.

There were strange inconsistencies about Jacqueline. She would stroll serenely down such places as Paradise Row, Poplar, where old Dobbin had lived, with perfect unconcern. She would have gone just as lightly-headed into the worst slum in London, no matter how low its repute. She never dreamed of dangers in the streets of London, where she had lived all her life, and her never been interfered with.

Other things, too, she was not scared about. But she always used to sing to keep her courage up, if she had to go upstairs in the dark, and she could not imagine anything more dreadful than to be alone in a country lane at night.

To be alone in the middle of a foggy field was far, far worse.

Suddenly she stumbled over something. She thought it was a mound of earth, and went sprawling across it. But the mound was warm, and it rose beneath her with a protesting bellow, spilling her off the other side on her hands and knees.

Jacqueline ran like a wild thing after the encounter with the cow, and was led at last by kindly fortune to another stile, on the step of which she sank exhausted and burst into tears.

After the adventures of this adventurous day she was perhaps entitled to a few tears. But she did not indulge in the weakness for long.

She sat for some minutes sobbing. Then she shook her slender shoulders and dried her eyes carefully with her handkerchief.

"What a time I'm having!" she told herself, commiseratingly. "I bet my nose is red. What wouldn't I give to be back in the old dormitory again at Byrns, having an argument with Emily Gibbs? If this is the sort of thing one gets from being wealthy! Oh, Teddy - Teddy -"

Then she cried a little more, and stopped abruptly with a gulp. "Oh, if only I could find a road somewhere, a main road for preference." But she was afraid to stir. She dared not explore the possible terrors that lay on the further side of this hospitable stile. She felt that the stile was her only safeguard, and feared to move away from it. She argued that if a cow appeared on one side she could climb over to the other. What to do if a cow appeared on both sides she dared not think.

After she had considered this point in fear and trembling for a quarter of an hour, she heard a sudden roaring, a rushing whirr of wheels, and a great blaze of lights flew past her on the other side of the stile.

It was a motor-car going at high speed.

All the time she had been considering the hopelessness of her position, the road - and a main road, too - was only just on the other side of the stile.

In a moment she was over and speeding down the road in the direction the car had taken. When she was out of breath she pulled up.

"You're not going to catch that, my child," she said. "Your brains have gone out for a walk or something. Better wait for the next one!"

So she followed more soberly, but it so happened that she did after all catch the great car which she had seen rushing recklessly through the fog.

In the stillness of the country night, she heard a distant thud and a metallic crash.

"Sounds as if that car has met something," said Jacqueline, and began to run again.

She was right. When she arrived breathless on the scene of the accident, she found a man pinned under the car. It had run up a bank and turned completely over.

The man was in a bad way. The car was lying across his body. He was on his back, his arms outspread and his head rolling from side to side. There was some blood on his face and he was moaning feebly.

He was an old man, too, with white hair and a short, well-trimmed beard. The wheels of the car were in the air, but the electric headlights were still burning.

The man was conscious, and in a tremulous tone asked Jacqueline to help him.

But how to help him? She caught hold of the edge of the car body with her pathetic little hands and tried to lift it. The result may be guessed.

Fortune and her own quick brain favored her.

Somebody had been cutting fence rails by the roadside, and there was a neat pile of stout poles eight feet long or so. Jacqueline very quickly saw the use of one of these.

She chose a pole, put the end under the car, and using it as a lever was able by the exertion of all her strength to move it an inch or two.

"Can you crawl out if I lift the car 'tuff you," she asked.

"Yes," whispered the old gentleman.

With the weight of the car on his chest, it was all he could do to speak at all.

Jacqueline heaved on her lever. The man drew himself clear of the wreck. He did it painfully and slowly, and before he was clear Jacqueline was white and panting with her efforts. She let the car down with a crash immediately he was clear.

"Oh! If you had been another minute I couldn't have held on. But I would have done."

She helped the old man to his feet. He was very tottery and leaned all his weight on her slim young shoulders, which were much stronger than they looked.

She guided him to the bank. Then she fetched a spring cushion which had been thrown out of the car, and made a comfortable seat for him.

No sooner had she got him comfortable than he fainted.

Jacqueline proves her resourcefulness tomorrow and is destined to rejoice at the meeting.

WILL ROGERS STARS AT FOX THEATRE

"So This Is London" Draws Many a Laugh at Local Theatre

The wit and philosophy of Will Rogers flows freely through "So This Is London," his second picture for the Fox theatre Monday. Rogers draws salary only as an actor, but he very seldom is at a loss to supply humorous dialog or create laughable situations during the making of a picture in which he is the central figure.

For example, the scene in "They Had to See Paris" where Irene Rich led Rogers into the capacious hall of the chateau and Rogers, taking his place on the second step of the broad stairs in a loud voice, called: "All aboard! New York Central express train going West, Albany, Syracuse, Buffalo, Cleveland and Chicago."

There was nothing in the script demanding this action, but it occurred to the nimble witted Rogers and he put it in—and it stayed in, with the result that it created one of the biggest laughs of the picture.

Rogers introduced many other laughable situations in "They Had to See Paris," and he has repeated in "So This Is London" which is replete with Rogersisms.

Miss Rich again appears with Rogers in his second all talking picture and other notables of the stage and screen in the supporting cast are Frank Albertson, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lumsden Hare, Mary Forbes, Dorothy Christy, Brannell Fletcher and Martha Lee Sparks.

John Blystone directed the production, based on George M. Cohan's international stage success.

GRAB BAG MATINEE IS PLANNED FOR KIDDIES

Starting Saturday afternoon the Fox theatre will begin the Saturday Grab Bag Matinee for the kiddies. Every child who attends the theatre will be given a grab bag as they leave the show. Each bag contains a prize. These prizes are valued all the way from five cents to one dollar and a half. These grab bags will consist of the following prizes: Amos and Andy taxis, dolls, games, tractors, air rifles and other mixed toys. The deeper you dig the better the prize.

Every week some of the prizes for the following week will be displayed in one of the store windows at the theatre.

MYSTERY THRILLER AT MIDNIGHT REVIEW

In "The Next Room" a true mystery picture with Jack Mulhall starring will be the feature presentation at the preview tonight at the Appleton Theatre. Midnight shows have proven very popular and with this stellar attraction it should prove more so. In "The Next Room" is a thrilling mystery picture full of suspense, thrills and a baffling plot. Alice Day is the heroine. This picture will thrill you as you have never been thrilled before. The supporting show claims an outstanding program of Vitaphone varieties. A Mack Sennett comedy heads the list titled "Good Eye Legs." Terrytoon cartoon follows, called "Bodfish Balls." Joseph Regan Irish tenor provides the singing, and Grace Johnson's girl band appears in a vitaphone act with plenty of hot rhythmic music. Metro Hearst News completes the program.

RIDING PIANO TEACHER RECALLS PIONEER DAYS

Council Bluffs, Iowa — (AP)—Mar Bouricous recalls the days when he fought through blizzards and a temperature of 20 below zero to give music lessons in pioneer farm parlors of western Iowa.

Bouricous recently celebrated the forty-fifth anniversary of his career as a circuit-riding piano teacher.

He made trips, in 1885, to the homes of 41 widely-scattered pupils twice a week, traveling on horseback.

"HELL HARBOR" STARS MANY HEADLINERS

One of the first all-talking productions to be filmed on location entirely out of doors is "Hell Harbor," the romantic drama starring Lupe Velez, which comes to the Fox Theatre two days starting Thursday.

The picture was suggested by Rita Johnson Young's novel, "Out of the Night," and is the work of Henry King, director of "The White Sister" and "Stella Dallas."

"Hell Harbor" is said to offer Lupe Velez the greatest opportunity of her screen career, presenting her in the part of a high spirited young modern, a descendant of the great pirate chief, Sir Henry Morgan. Around this theme is developed a story rich in incident, local color and tense drama. There are the thrilling fight in the honky-tonk between Morgan and Wade, the death battle between Morgan and Horngold and the strange life that is to be found under the Caribbean moon. Filmed in Tampa, Florida, amidst natural tropical settings, "Hell Harbor" is said to have one of the most beautiful backgrounds used for a picture. The entire production was filmed in this locale; there is not a studio shot in the picture.

The cast of "Hell Harbor" includes beside Lupe Velez and Jean Hersholt, John Holland, Guson Gowan, Al St. John, Henry Allen, Paul E. Burns and George Book-Asta.

OLD TIME STOVE PROVES TROUBLESOME

Stove Raises Havoc on Set for "The Richest Man in the World"

The good old airtight stove the boys used to sit around in the country grocery may be picturesque, but it has no place on an airtight sound stage in the movies. One was used for one scene in "The Richest Man in the World," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Main Street" drama coming Sat. Aug. 2 to the Fox Theatre. After it had smoked out Louis Mann and the rest of the players it was discontinued as a stove, and operated by electric lights inside.

This was the most comical of the technical problems encountered in filming the new picture, a story of American family life in which Mann plays the principal character role. Electric alarm lights on the cameras figured in another invention on the set. They were fastened to the cameras to "flash" the mixer at the mixing panel when the director wanted to "cut in" certain sounds. The signals proved silent and effective.

The picture traces the fortunes of a family for three generations. It starts with Mann and his small children, sees them grow up, and finally have children of their own. As the picture progresses, the march of progress is seen; Mann remains the old barber while his children become doctors, teachers, inventors, and many leave the old home. There is tragedy, comedy, pathos and drama in the story, which is literally a cross section of human life.

Sam Wood directed the new film written by J. C. Nugent and Elliott Nugent, and adapted by Samuel Ornitz. A notable cast appears including Leila Hyams, Robert Montgomery, Elliott Nugent, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Clara Blandick, Henry Armetta and Robert McWade.

MEDICINE SHOW IN ALL ITS GLORY AT ELITE

"Ladies and gentlemen!" The old medicine show in all its glory is a hilarious and reminiscent feature in Tiffany's all talking comedy drama, "The Medicine Man," showing at the Elite Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. "The Medicine Man" was a stage play originally, written by Elliott Lester, and adapted for the screen by Layde Horton and Eve Unsell. "The Medicine Man" himself is the proprietor of the show, and in small towns he's a big cheik. The glory of his show is a flashy background for his conquests of uninitiated small town belles. Of course, there are all kinds of hummers, patent medicines and the like, including the one that removes corns or table stains, tones up the liver, grows eyelashes, cures skin diseases and doubles the mileage of an automobile. "The Medicine Man" was directed by Scott Pembroke. Prominent in the cast are Jack Benny, Betty Bronson, Eva Novak, Tom Dugan and others. It was recorded by RCA Photophone.

"Mind Your Business" is the comedy offering of the program. The feature will be "On The Border" with Armida, charming Mexican actress, and she is well supported by no other than Rin Tin Tin, the wonder dog.

GRIPPING STORY OF RIO GRANDE BORDER

Fierce accusations were hurled up and back. A swift stroke and a bold, passion flower of the Rio Grande, fell, a victim of her piece lover. She loved not wisely, but too well—and two men. And these men were blood relatives. One, a dashing, attractive half American whose mother had been driven out of her home by her very father when she gave her heart to a man from the States, the other, a covetous killer, heir to the vast estate. These men were soon to meet. Another girl was to intervene. No mercy was to be given . . . and none asked.

It's all revealed in "Romance of Rio Grande," the outdoor epic of the southwest border, made by Fox MOVIE TONE . . . and showing at the Elite Theatre today and Sunday. Warner Baxter, Mary Duncan and Antonio Moreno head the cast, all great names. Alfred Santell directed this colorful adaptation of Katherine Fullerton Gerould's novel, "Conquistador."

Remember the dates today and Sunday. You've got a treat in store for yourself.

BRIGHT FUTURE IN TELEVISION SEEN BY BABSON

Amateurs Will Help Develop This Activity, He Believes

Babson Park, Mass.—Television today is where radio was 15 years ago, so far as the public is concerned.
 Amateurs were then just beginning to make crystal radio sets and to hear faint noises out of the air. Now the amateurs are just beginning on television. Before long there will probably be large numbers of amateur experimenters constructing home-made sets, buying parts, and generally stirring up interest in the new art. If television follows the path of radio, the experiments of the amateurs will spread the spirit of contagion, so that nearly every home will sooner or later have its own television apparatus. Thus far the public has shown only a vague ac-cademic interest in this subject, believing it too complicated and too imperfect to engage their active interest. That stage will pass as further developments in the new art bring it nearer to perfection.

Several recent developments have reawakened public interest. Dr. Alexander, engineer of General Electric Company and Radio Corporation, recently put on in a Schenectady theatre a vaudeville act by television. This included music and singing, jokes, and a regular vaudeville performance. The actors were in the television laboratory more than a mile away from the theatre stage. The audience watched the show on a screen similar to a moving picture screen. It was highly successful. Just the other day the British Broadcasting Corporation put on television play from a studio in London, which was enjoyed by private homes, and other places where televisions had been installed. Shortly another demonstration in London will be given on a large screen measuring four feet by five feet.

USES OF TELEVISION
 It may be five, ten, or fifteen years before television reaches the state of popularity enjoyed by the radio. There is still much experimental work to be done before it becomes practical for any but the scientifically inclined amateurs. The general public is not equipped and does not care to bother with a device which requires mechanical skill and technical knowledge to operate.
 These mechanical difficulties, however, will in time be overcome. That does not mean the elimination of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of radio equipment. Television growth will be gradual. One who is contemplating buying a radio set need not fear television; he will have plenty of time to enjoy his radio and get his money's worth out of it before television comes into general use.

It is of interest to consider what probable uses this new instrument will find in our social and economic life. Certain enthusiasts would have us believe that it will revolutionize existing methods of entertainment, news publication, educational work, the moving picture industry, etc. If by revolutionizing these means, it directly supplant the existing equipment of these industries, they are mistaken. Established industries will take television and use it to supplement, modify, and improve their service to the public. Then we shall have what is virtually a new industry comparable to radio, requiring apparatus valued at hundreds of millions of dollars.

FOR AMUSEMENT, EDUCATION Television has vast educational and entertainment possibilities when it is finally perfected. In preparation for that day a huge building in the heart of New York City is soon to be erected, which will contain several large theatres, a moving picture studio, radio studios and television studios. This will be used to broadcast regular plays, symphonies, and pictures to a vast audience scattered throughout the country, as well as to serve the audience which personally attends the performances. The time will come when the moving picture houses throughout the country will instead of showing pictures in addition to their regular picture programmes, and the inclusion on the program of at least one television act.

In connection with churches and schools it will be possible for a famous preacher or educator from a central radio church to give a lecture or sermon in picture and in sound before a thousand different audiences at the same time just as though he were personally appearing. The possibilities of television for schools and colleges and churches opens up a new vista for education.
RELATION TO NEWSPAPERS Television can never supplant the daily newspapers, because people must have a record of what has happened. If every one could carry with him constantly a television receiver and happen to be looking into it when events in the news occur, then there might be no need for newspapers. Such is not the case and certainly not likely to be. To say television will harm newspapers is entirely wrong. Instead it will help them. News reporters with television instruments can in a simple way fly at once to the scene of an accident, catastrophe, peace conference, earthquake, or other great news story and at once transmit to his paper not only the story but the picture.

It is also possible that by means of the new high speed presses and electrically operated typesetters, world news events can be sent at once to a master keyboard and the whole page broadcast to a thousand daily newspapers all over the country. On receiving end there is the possibility of a camera negative printing the picture directly on the surface of a press cylinder.

Natural color printing also may be a possibility for the newspapers in the future. Radio, the newspapers, and television will work together, each supplementing the other and each using the new electrical

Boom In Building May Mean Pick-Up In Trade

One of the first signs of approaching business recession came in 1929 with the falling off in building construction. This great basic activity had been one of the mainstays of prosperity, and the influence of its decline was widely felt.

The importance of construction in the business situation was recognized by President Hoover when the stock market crash spread economic gloom last November. The efforts of the administration were directed toward restoring the balance wheel of construction to health, through the stimulation of large projects by public utilities, states and municipalities.

Evidence at last is at hand that these efforts are bearing fruit. In June construction awards reported by the F. W. Dodge Corporation in 37 states totaled $600,573,400, the largest for any month since July, 1929.

The increase over May was 31 per cent and the gain over June, 1929, was 12 per cent. This is the first time this year that any month's building contracts have exceeded a corresponding month of 1929. Most of the increase was due to gains in public works and public utility projects, which now lead the list of all classes of building. Residential buildings continue to lag.

Building construction has a way of pointing to business recovery, after a period of recession, just as it does to business decline following a period of great activity. If the present upward trend of building continues it will constitute a favorable augury for industry and employment.

LEHIGH VALLEY DEPENDENT UPON TRAFFIC IN COAL

Value as Part of Some Other System Also Plays Important Part

EDITOR'S NOTE: (This is the twenty-first of a series of brief studies by Mr. H. H. Hughes, experts. The intent is not to recommend the purchase or sale of any particular stock but to give the investor such information as may enable him intelligently to chart his own course.)

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES

 New York.—The two important facts to be taken into consideration by intending investors in Lehigh Valley stock are first the dependence of the route upon anthracite coal traffic and second its value as a part of some other system. It is always a point of weakness when a railroad derives too large a percentage of its loadings from any one commodity.

If anything adverse happens to the demand for that commodity the road suffers in greater proportion than one which has a more diversified traffic. In recent years, however, the Lehigh Valley has made progress in increasing the amount of merchandise carried although it is still primarily a coal road. The merchandise is carried through it in its present resting with Pennsylvania interests with the Interstate Commerce Commission citing the Clayton Act in opposition and in its merger plan putting the road in the Wabash-Seaboard system. Whatever the outcome the minority shareholders ought to fare well.

All the bonds are investments of the highest grade with interest charges covered twice over. There is a negligible amount of preferred stock but the only public interest is in the common. This is of $50 par and outstanding to the amount of 1,210,034 shares. The present dividend rate is 7 per cent or $3.50 a share annually. On January 22 last an extra dividend of $1 a share was declared. The stock is inactive marketwise with wide fluctuations between sales the rule rather than the exception. At recent quotations the yield is liberal if the extra dividend is being taken into account.

Earnings at the present rate, however, do not justify the expectation that the extra will be continued. On the basis of the finest five months of the year something between $4 and $4.50 will be shown for the stock.

CAN BE GREAT FORCE Television can be a great factor in furthering the world's peace. By bringing people of one nation face to face in communication with the people of another, a deeper and more tolerant understanding of the customs, aspirations, ideals of each can be attained. Already we can talk across the ocean. Soon we shall see across it. This visual communication for long distances will probably first come through the television telephone. Such an instrument has been perfected in the United States and is known as the "Ikonophone".
 One sits in a booth and talks to a friend at a distant point, and both parties face the image of the other, much as though they were sitting in the same room. This experimental system is now established between the American Telephone & Telegraph Company's New York and the Bell Laboratories, which are two miles distant from each other. This is an example of wired television as distinguished from wireless television.

Television, if rightly handled, can become a great force in the educational, cultural, and spiritual advancement of the world. Pictures do not lie. No better way of disseminating the truth has ever been devised.

SEE INCREASE IN GRAIN CROPS IN STATE THIS YEAR

Production of Hay and Fruit, However, Will Be Smaller

Madison — (P)—The Wisconsin 1930 crop outlook indicates that increased yields in grain crops, truck crops, and cash crops are in store for farmers this year as compared to 1929, Walter Ebling, agricultural statistician announced today. He predicted that the production of hay, and fruit crops will be smaller than a year ago.

Acres have changed in a year's time, Mr. Ebling reported, with increases registered in corn, winter wheat, barley, rye, alfalfa, potatoes, tobacco, sugar beets, and truck crops. Their increase, he states, come at the expense of hay, which shows a two per cent decrease in time hay, and five per cent slumps in the acreages of timothy hay and clover over last year.

His report on the state's leading crops is:

Hay—Production will total about 5,761,000 tons as compared to 7,390-000 tons in 1929. The crop is uneven, with good crops reaped in some southern and southwestern counties, and scattered areas of central and northern Wisconsin. Heavy frosts May 17 damaged many of the hay crops.

Corn—A two per cent increase in acreage is noted this year over 1929.
 Southern Wisconsin corn generally looks good. Crop estimates are 83-000,000 bushels this year as compared to 81,440,000 bushels in 1929.

Oats—While acreage is about the same as last year, the 1930 outlook points to a better crop. Wisconsin's production forecast is 105,000,000 bushels.

Barley—Since 1924, the barley acreage has been climbing until this year's reaches 110,000 acres. Barley's condition is better than a year ago, and it is estimated that 24,140,000 bushels will be harvested as compared to a smaller 1929 yield.

Wheat—Wisconsin has only about 108,000 acres in wheat, slightly more than last year, which had the lowest acreage in 75 years. The crop looks "fairly good," and production probably will amount to slightly more than 1929.

Potatoes—Wisconsin's leading cash crop has about a 12 per cent increase in acreage with an estimated yield of 26,568,000 bushels as compared to 20,240,000 bushels last year.
 The market promises to be "fairly satisfactory."

Tobacco—An eight per cent acreage increase is recorded, with favorable prospects pointing to a 50,000-000-pound yield.

Canning crops show an increase, cabbage crops an increase, a 10 per cent increase in onions is indicated, while clover seed is about like a year ago, Mr. Ebling says. Fruit crops may fall below normal because of May frosts, he reported.

BIDS ARE SOUGHT FOR 3 NEW POSTOFFICES

(Post-Crescent Wash. Bureau)
 Washington — The Treasury Department will advertise the latter part of this week for bids for sites for the new postoffices at South Milwaukee, Two Rivers and Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., all of which were authorized in the second deficiency appropriation bill.

The postoffice at South Milwaukee will cost $120,000 for both the site and the construction of the building.
 The cost limit at Two Rivers is $180,000 and at Wisconsin Rapids, it is $125,000.

The bids for these three sites will be opened at the Treasury Department here on August 29, but bids may be submitted at any time previous to a decision.

The Treasury Department is seeking additional land adjoining the Beloit postoffice for extension and remodeling of that building and has authorized the postmaster at Beloit to seek prices on suitable land. This project, which will cost $270,000, was also authorized in the deficiency bill.

IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS NOTED DURING LAST WEEK

Government Officials More Optimistic Now Than in Long Time

BY J. C. ROYLE
 Copyright, 1930, By Cons. Press
 Washington — (CPA) — A distinct psychological gain has been registered by business in the last week.
 That is, business men and government officials feel far more optimistic than they have felt for a long while. It is beginning to be apparent, they declare, that the improvement which had been counted on for the third quarter of 1930 is making its belated appearance.

Profits of many industrial companies have better prospects compared with the second quarter return.
 Sales of electrical energy by the larger utilities are registering gains of from 5 to 8 per cent as compared with 1929. Commodity prices are still low but occasional advances are being registered.

Which are under control of governmental and public bodies are registering decided increases. Awards of contracts for this construction are approximately $250,000,000 larger this year so far than for the corresponding period of 1929, according to the Associated General Contractors of America.

This advance, however, has not counterbalanced the drop in residential construction, which has shown a decline of over 12 per cent compared with last year.

STEEL DEMAND HEAVY
 The demand for structural steel and hardware is steady, however, and apparently can be counted on safely by the steel mills. The confidence of the steel men in the near future of the industry is well exemplified by their acquisition by the United States Steel Corporation of the option on the control of the Oil Well Supply company. This also indicates that the construction of gas lines from the oil fields to the industrial centers will continue to be a major factor in the industry for many months.

Some of the larger automobile manufacturers have shown a decided increase in output in the last week.
 The general total, however, is far under that of a year ago. Production of crude oil is fairly steady, but the average is 300,000 barrels a day under that of a year ago. Stocks of crude are being gradually decreased as are those of gasoline, which now total about 50,000,000 barrels.

The optimism with regard to the general situation is exemplified also by the electrical equipment manufacturers, who are reported to be preparing to fill their requirements for copper for months to come.

COPPER CURTAILED
 There is a feeling that metal quotations have almost touched bottom and are due for a turn upward. Copper production has been strongly curtailed in the last month and has reached the lowest point since February 1923. It is today over 30 per cent less than it was a year ago.
 Cement output is, holding fairly steady.

American cotton mills are not piling up profits at a high rate, but they are putting themselves in a most advantageous statistical position. Stocks are being held down and it is only a matter of time until the demand must make itself apparent in renewed buying. The situation in India and China has mitigated severely against the textile trade. The demand for woolsens is slack and the supply of raw wool is extremely large. The lamb crop has shown a gain this year, according to the department of agriculture.

Leather prices are reflecting to some extent the low prices of hides.
 Shoe production is off materially as compared with last year, but there has been a new market built up for leather in the craft work now being popularized in the summer camps for boys and girls. There has been a slight gain in the stocks of print paper on hand at the mills, but consumption has been fairly well maintained.

The railroads are carrying fully as much freight as they did last year at this time. Agricultural products are moving rapidly and coal is being steadily shifted to consuming centers. Freight trains are moving faster than ever before, with an average speed of almost 14 miles per hour for all freight trains between terminals. The railroads are now transporting freight 32 per cent faster on the average than 10 years ago, and it would have required 23,000,000 more tons of coal than have been consumed to carry the same amount of freight in 1920 as will be transported in 1930.

INSULATION STARTED TO PLANTS BY BURROS

Los Angeles — (P)—From far up in the Inyo mountains of California pack burros start a little known mineral on its way to automobile and aviation factories.

It is andalusite, used as insulating material in spark plugs, according to the United States Bureau of Mines.

The largest known deposit of the mineral is in the White Mountains of the Inyo range, 10,000 feet above sea level, hence the use of the burros.

They bring the mineral down a steep trail four and a half miles long to the valley 6,000 feet below.

WOMEN WRESTLERS

Paris — An effort to attract thrill-seekers to their establishments, night club owners and other palaces of recreation are featuring women wrestlers. The bouts are featured by representatives from all European nations, and through an elimination system, the two best wrestlers appear in the final bout to decide the championship of Europe.

MUELLER CABINET SHOP FEATURES OLD ANTIQUE FURNITURE

150-year Old Rose-wood Desk Is Most Unique of Old Collection

One of the most complete assortments of real antique furniture, free of all ultra-modern imitations is to be found at the Mueller Cabinet shop, E. Johnson-st. between N.
 Durkee and N. Drew-sts. Edward Mueller, 60 Bellaire-st, is the proprietor.

Mr. Mueller has spent years studying and dealing in antique furniture, and unlike many dealers in antique furniture, every piece handled by him is genuine, proof of which is available in the history surrounding the various assortments of furniture.

One of the most unique pieces to be found in the shop is an old rosewood desk, which is approximately 100 to 150 years old. It is constructed of genuine rose-wood, not to be duplicated by furniture manufacturers today.

It is complete in every detail, one of the interesting features of antique furniture. Every piece of wood used in its construction is matched and flawless. It is expected with all the old fashioned drawers, pigeon holes and other secret compartments, not found in 1930-31 model
 furniture.

It is of natural rose-wood color, and cannot be duplicated, and is one of the few of its kind manufactured.
 Antique collectors from throughout Wisconsin and neighboring states have viewed and inspected the old desk, and declare it to be the best.

Also included in Mr. Mueller's collection are old sewing tables constructed of genuine cherry, butternut, walnut, birch, mahogany, curly maple, and other kinds of wood.
 He has several antique curly maple four poster beds; walnut and butter-nut chests equipped with ancient drawers, and many models of drop-leaf tables.
